Ag Symposium: Tools To Make Ag Profitable

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Twenty-one research projects funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) took center stage as researchers gave descriptive presentations at the capitol complex on Thursday.

"It's important that we bring professionals into the public venues to make presentations about their research," said Sam Hayes, secretary of agriculture.

"They are asked to be sensitive to the things that are of critical importance to farmers and agribusiness," he said, adding that the projects should add to the profitability of agricultural production. It should be easy to transfer research from the research site to the user site.

"Our effort ought to be to make agriculture more profitable. We have to help producers remain competitive in a highly competitive world. One way to do this is to do research to put tools in their hands to remain profitable. These 21 presentations are only the tip of the ice-

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — As Pennsylvania livestock operations become larger and more prone to public scrutiny, agricultural leaders are taking up the challenge to promote environmental awareness and good relationships between producers and their surrounding communities.

The Pennsylvania Environmental Agricultural Conservation Certification of Excellence (PEACCE) is a new program to officially recognize producers who implement practices that "minimize risks to the environment and in turn minimize personal liability."

Prompted by Pennsylvania Senate Resolution 91 and conducted in association with America's Clean Water Foundation (ACWF), the PEACCE project includes an environmental awareness course and on-farm assessment, followed by on-farm certification for qualified farms.

This year, the program is being offered in Berks, Chester, and Lancaster counties, with the goal of extending the program across the state.

On Tuesday this week, state Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. announced that the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) is providing every county and community fair with E.coli and FMD posters.

On Call With Dippel

Part 2 of 2

Editor's note: The veterinary profession, an integral part of the agriculture industry, is the focus of Lancaster Farming's latest series. This article, part two of a two-part series highlighting the occupation, follows Peter Dippel, DVM, as he treats animals during a typical day's work.

SALUNGA (Lancaster Co.) — When veterinarian Peter Dippel pulls into a barnyard, the house, yard, and surrounding landscape may be quiet and serene.

The first sign of life may be the approach of a farm dog — an essential element on area farms — which is usually the first to greet Dippel when he arrives on the property.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
June 13, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Favorable weather across the Midwest added pressure to bids. Some light export interest for wheat and corn was reported. Wheat mostly 1 cent lower except Portland 2 cents higher. Corn steady to 1 cent lower. Sorghum 1 cent lower. Soybeans 1 to 3 cents higher.

Wheat bids were slightly lower as harvest progress continued. Good yields and quality have been reported most places. South Korea bought a mixture of wheat overnight. Good growing weather was also the weaken- ing factor for corn. Soybean bids were slightly higher on carryover strength from the recent Chinese purchase.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK ALMANAC

JUNE 18–24, 2001

NEW MOON, JUNE 21

AND THE LIVING IS EASY?

Easy or not, summertime makes its debut at 3:38 A.M. Eastern Daylight Time on June 21. The solstice happens on a Thursday, so come Friday, hang up your hammock and take stock of what it is you're working for. Perhaps you believe, as did British dramatist Noel Coward (1899–1973), that "Work is much more fun than fun." If so, you're lucky. English writer Jerome K. Jerome (1859–1927) argued, "It is impossible to enjoy idling unless there is plenty of work to do." Perhaps Chinese philosopher Confucius (551–479 B.C.) had the solution: "Choose a job you love, and you will never have to work a day in your life."

We work, in order to have leisure.

–Aristotle, Greek philosopher (384–322 B.C.)

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

There are a hundred days of easterly wind in the first half of the year.

A sweating wall indicates rain.

OPINION

Going Global

For one moment, if you think that the biggest ag issues are the spotlight of debates exclusively in the western world (places such as U.S. or as far away as the United Kingdom), think again.

If you enjoy Internet surfing, check out the National Agricultural Library (www.nal.usda.gov/) and click on the left bar under "Ag Events Calendar" (or go directly to the calendar by typing in www.agnic.org/mtg/2001.html).

It's almost hard to believe how many different types of symposia and conferences are scheduled for a given month on a planetwide basis. And the major issues in agriculture truly are global.

Along with the customary producer events (the Fifth International Peach Symposium scheduled July 9-11 in Davis, Calif.), you also have the 12th International Congress on Photosynthesis, Aug. 18-23 in Brisbane, Queensland, Australia.

Along with the Sixth International Congress on Plant Mitochondria Aug. 23-26 in Brisbane, you have the Physical Methods in Agriculture event Aug. 27-30 in Prague, Czech Republic.

There are standard items you'd expect to see. Such as the Central Veterinary Conference Aug. 25-28 in Kansas City, Mo. And the Biocycle Southeast Conference, Composting and Organics Recycling — The Soil and Water Connections, Aug. 27-29 in Atlanta, Ga.

There are 33 international items scheduled for August alone. It boggles the mind!

No area of speculation about ag's future is left undiscovered at these events. Just last week was the Fourth International Workshop On Artificial Intelligence In Agriculture, June 6-8 in Budapest, Hungary. The applications of artificial intelligence in agriculture, the conference focus, showcases the use of "emerging technologies," according to the write-up: "neural network, genetic algorithms, fuzzy control, constraint satisfaction, and case-based reasoning."

The workshop was conducted in the Hotel Eben at Budapest and on the campus of the Szent Istvan University. The conference language was in English, of course.

We at Lancaster Farming strive to keep our readers as up to date as possible about farm events, conferences, and symposia. I suppose we have to be selective.

We just wonder: how many of our readers would like to know about neural networks, genetic algorithms, fuzzy control, constraint satisfaction, and case-based reasoning? I'm sure in some ways, large or small, they impact agriculture in any number of ways.

To Use The Pre-Sidedress Soil Nitrate Test (PSNT)

Providing the correct amount of nitrogen for corn production is very important. Applying too much nitrogen wastes money and can contribute to ground and surface water contamination.

If the available nitrogen is less than needed by the crop, however, yields will suffer. If the fields in question have a history of manure use, the PSNT is an important tool to determine which fields should be sidedressed with nitrogen and which have enough residual nitrogen.

With the high cost of nitrogen fertilizer this year and the low price of corn, it is especially important to determine how much nitrogen is needed by each field.

The PSNT was developed to help answer this question. Research has shown if the soil nitrate-N level is above 21 ppm, there is little chance of an economic response to adding additional N to the field. At soil nitrate-N levels below 21 ppm, sidedress nitrogen will be needed to obtain optimum yield. This test has most value on fields with a significant contribution from organic N sources, such as a history of manure application or use of a forage legume in the crop rotation.

This test is not useful on fields where the primary nitrogen source is from fertilizer.

The soil sample should be taken when the corn is 12 inches tall or at least a week before planned sidedressing. Walk the field in a random pattern and take 10-20 cores to a 12-inch depth, if possible. If a 12-inch depth is not possible, then take the samples as deeply as you can. Avoid starter bands and other atypical areas. Because of sampling problems this test cannot be used on fields that received injected fertilizer or manure.

It is important to dry the sample as quickly as possible. Crush the cores and combine them into one sample per field. Spread and dry the samples in the sun or under a heat lamp in a well-ventilated area. Send the samples to a reputable lab for soil nitrate-N analysis, or use a field test kit for soil nitrate-N to determine the nitrate-N level in the sample.

If the level is 21 ppm or higher, no sidedress N is needed. If the level is less than 21 ppm, use the worksheet in the Agronomy Facts 17 publication entitled "Pre-sidedress Soil Nitrate Test for Corn" to determine the nitrogen rate needed. This publication is available from your county extension office and also on the Internet at http://www.agronomy.psu.edu/Extension/Facts/agfact17.pdf. The worksheet can also be found in the agronomy guide.

To Learn More About Composting

Composting does provide possibilities for moving surplus manure off the farm to other users. It does take significant effort, however, to produce compost. Before venturing into this alternative, it is important to become knowledgeable about the process.

The Department of Environmental Protection in partnership with the Pennsylvania Compost Association, the Pennsylvania Association of Sustainable Agriculture, and the Professional Recyclers of Pennsylvania — will conduct a free composting conference June 28. The event, entitled "Growing Your Business: Composting Strategies for Expanding Markets," will be at the Holiday Inn in Grantville from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Acting DEP Secretary David E. Hess will be among the featured speakers as well as nationally known recycling and composting expert Nora Goldstein. Bob Rynk of the U.S. Compost Council will also address the conference. The conference will include presentations from the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation and DEP's Bureau of Mining, recycling initiatives, and private industry perspectives on recycling organic wastes. A panel discussion will help business owners learn about new markets for compost and how to make their compost more competitive.

Although there is no charge to attend, preregistration is required. To register visit DEP's website at http://www.dep.state.pa.us/ and type in "composting conference" at the directLINK box. For more information, contact Pamela Rosser at (215)-772-0118.

❖ Farm Forum ❖

Editor:

As a dairy princess, I look forward to June. This festive month marks the beginning and ending of dairy princesses reigns (as well as my own). It also is Dairy Month.

If you are not familiar with the dairy industry, you might be wondering what the big deal is.

June is the month when the dairy industry begins the summer season by promoting their wholesome products, not to mention saluting the 10,000 dairy farmers throughout Pennsylvania for all of their hard work and dedication to produce nature's most perfect food, milk.

Because we live in a fast-paced society, we take for granted the small things in life. For instance, can you imagine a world of cereal without milk, sundaes without ice cream, or biscuits without butter? If you can't, make sure you thank the dairy farmer.

Believe it or not, milk and dairy products just don't appear at the grocery store for you to buy. Dairy farmers are dedicated to providing you with safe, high-quality milk and dairy products.

Their commitment to quality goes beyond caring for their animals and the land. This way of life has been passed down from generation to generation. Farming is in their blood. It's a tradition that farmers want to pass on to their children and grandchildren.

I am honored to represent an industry that works year-round to make sure you have the most wholesome, high-quality dairy products available. I am also very proud to say that my family is one of the 60,000 farm families across that state to be able to carry on the legacy my great grandfather began in 1941.

Help support all dairy farmers by consuming more dairy products.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

LIMPING THROUGH LIFE

Background Scripture:
1 Kings 18.
Devotional Reading:
Joshua 24:14-18.

The story of the great contest between Elijah and the prophets of Baal on Mount Carmel has both four important lessons for us and two thorny issues.

I'll begin with the first important lesson: God sends prophets to disturb us. When King Ahab sees the prophet Elijah approaching him, he calls out: "Is it you, you troubler of Israel?" (v.17). As far as the king is concerned, Elijah is a troublemaker. In the Old Testament there is an unwritten theme: if you are enjoying what the prophet is saying, you either don't understand him or he is not a prophet. There are prophetic voices in our own time, I believe, but these prophets are not, cannot be popular.

The second important lesson is that the trouble is not with the prophet, but with those who hear the prophet. Elijah replies to Ahab: "I have not troubled Israel, but you have, and you father's house, because you have forsaken the commandments of the Lord and followed the Baals" (v.18).

The comic-strip character Pogo put it well: "We have met the enemy and they are us!" God's prophet is not the enemy. We are our own enemy and prophetic voices are sent so that we can stop causing ourselves trouble.

A Little Baal, A Little Yahweh

The third important teaching is actually the crux of this whole chapter: in your life you cannot mix a little worship of Baal with a little worship of God and still leave room for God.

Elijah's trouble with Ahab is that the king seems to think that he can accommodate both Baal and Yahweh in his kingdom. "Let's be tolerant, here!" is probably his theme. "There's room for both."

We know Ahab is wrong, yet we often fail to apply that understanding to our own society. Our problem is not with the worship of Baal, nor even Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism, whatever. The religion that is most dangerous to Christianity today is the secular religion of materialism/consumerism that we try to embrace with one hand while embracing Christianity on the other. We honor God but worship things.

Note that I have purposely used the visual analogy of "embracing with one hand" — a virtual impossibility! You need two hands and two arms to embrace anything and that is what Elijah is saying: you cannot embrace both Baal and Yahweh.

Elijah uses another analogy: "limping through life." When the priests of Baal performed their rituals, they danced around the altar, bending, leaping, and contorting their bodies. Sarcastically, Elijah calls it "limping" and he says that is exactly what the people of Israel are doing when they offer one foot to Yahweh and another to Baal.

If The Lord Is God

So the fourth important lesson is his challenge to them and to us: "How long will you go limping with two different opinions? If the Lord is God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him" (v. 21).

Don't keep sitting on a fence. Make a choice and stick with it. As Ralph Washington Sockman once put it: "A mind may entertain a host of different intellectual opinions and scientific theories, but religion involves commitment."

That brings me to the first of the thorny issues. When the priests of Baal have obviously failed to induce their god to set fire to the offering on their altar, Elijah prays that Yahweh would do exactly that on the altar he had built: "Then the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the burnt offering . . ." (v. 38).

Good for Elijah and good for the Israelites who witnessed this, but what about us? Are we to prove the superiority of our God with similar contests? Shall we invite people to follow Jesus Christ only if we can replicate Elijah's spectacular? Is that the only way or even the best way to prove the God revealed in Jesus Christ? Or is it in the lives that we live?

And, in our certainty that the way of Christ is the highest revelation of God, shall we respond as Elijah did on Carmel and slaughter the advocates of other religions?

Crownvetch Industry Is As Perennial As Plant Itself

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co Correspondent

PINE GROVE MILLS (Centre Co) — Dr Fred Grau Sr discovered a pretty lavender-flowered cover plant along a shale pit near Virginville, Berks County, in 1935

Little did he know that it would become one of the most sought-after ground covers for the highway department in the '60s and a sole source of business income for his son, one of only three or four major crownvetch producers in the country

By discovering crownvetch and developing the production and marketing of the crop, Fred became the founder of the crownvetch industry

"He didn't know what it was," said Fred Grau Jr. "He was an extension agronomist in turf at Penn State in 1935 He brought some back to Penn State and identified it. He immediately saw the erosion control use for it

"In the late '40s and early '50s, Penn State picked up on the idea of using it. My father, Penn State, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Highways together conducted three years of research on crownvetch in the late '40s Then they released it as Penngift Crown-

Seeleys' Milky Way Farm Reaps Benefits Of Grazing

CAROLYN N MOYER
Bradford Co Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) — For the Seeley family of Milky Way Farm in Troy, the call of springtime is getting stronger and stronger every day

It not only signals the start of a new growing season, but a shift in focus for their entire operation

"We will rotate cows by mid-April, even though there is no grass," said Kim Seeley, who has seen his farming focus change dramatically over the years 'The reason we do that is to get the animals out of the barn I think it's important to start grazing early just for our mentality The cows are excited, too They get spring fever just like we do"

Seeley's grandparents purchased the farm in 1928 In 1962, Kim's parents, Lewis and Marie, expanded the operation by building a restaurant and jugging operation Their goal at that time was to earn enough money to put their four children through college, which they did Kim and his wife Ann, along with their two sons — Shon, 18 and Dane, 8 — are an integral part of the operation

For many years the Seeleys ran a conventional dairy along with their jugging operation In fact, they hold the claim to having the oldest free stall barn in Bradford County After a barn fire, the Seeleys decided to move all the animals to a central location with the milking animals in total confinement

We built a brand new barn in 1976 because of a barn fire For eight years we were in total confine-

Whole milk chocolate milk is one of the Milky Way's successes. Kim Seeley says that the whole milk and better ingredients set their product apart from the rest. The Seeleys have been operating a jugging plant since 1982.

NFU: Energy Policy

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) recently called for a greater commitment to renewable sources of energy and an immediate investigation into current energy prices.

While the administration's newest energy report makes mention of renewable sources of energy and the energy price crisis impacting Americans today, the family-farmer-and-rancher organization is concerned that the proposal does not embrace the full portfolio of renewable sources.

NFU urges commitment to the farm-produced resources available to meet our nation's need for affordable, secure, dependable, and environmentally friendly energy.

Compared to last week: Feeder cattle and calves steady. Demand good. Large supply of Brahma cross cattle continues with bulk of receipts yearlings. Quality plain to average. Feeder cattle in medium to moderate flesh, few fleshy. Weigh-ups average to full. The continued good demand at auctions had some ranchers rethinking their marketing strategies as they opted to pass the country bid and sell in town.

Slaughter cows and bulls steady to 1.50 lower. Packer demand moderate. Total of 300 cows and bulls sold with 56 percent to packers. Receipts this week 14,365; last week 18,299; last year 8701.

Supply consisted of 78 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 20 percent calves and light yearlings under 600 lbs; 2 percent cows and bulls.

Heifers comprised 37 percent of feeder and calf supply.

Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

PDA Releases

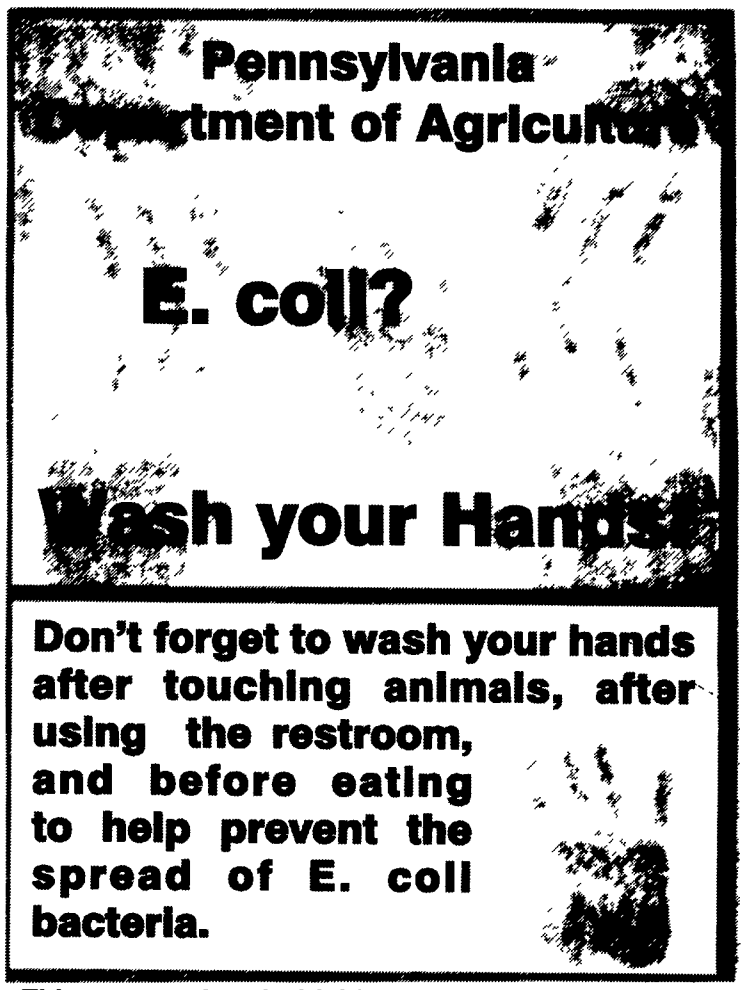
"These posters will be provided at no cost to the fairs," noted Hayes. "Statewide, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is providing 3,000 copies of each poster (for a total of 6,000). Each fair will receive several copies of each poster."

The posters will be placed at appropriate locations, including fairground entrances, livestock barns, restrooms/washrooms, and general eating areas.

The PDA is also providing FMD posters to all ports of entry into Pennsylvania at no cost to the ports.

The E. coli poster uses hand-prints with a stark blue background on a deep blue border to remind all fairgoers to wash their hands after touching animals, after using the restroom, and before eating to help prevent the spread of E. coli bacteria.



Pennsylvania
tment of Agricultu
E. coli?
Wash your Hands!
Don't forget to wash your hands after touching animals, after using the restroom, and before eating to help prevent the spread of E. coli bacteria.

This poster printed with blue borders and big black type warns those who touch animals to wash hands before eating. Posters are being distributed to fairs.

E. coli bacteria have been identified as a cause of human illness. An alleged contagion of E. coli with visitors to a petting zoo in Montgomery County was recently reported.

An FMD poster with a deep red background and black and white reproductions of various livestock species provides educational "bullets" of information about the FMD virus and how to improve farm biosecurity.

Another poster, similar to the FMD poster at fairs but specifically aimed at ports, implores travelers to make sure the Customs Form includes all visits to farms or livestock contact while out of the U.S.

The poster instructs travelers to declare all food and ag items in their possession on the Customs Form.

It also asks that travelers avoid all contact with livestock, wildlife, or zoo animals for at least five days after returning from international travel.

PEACCE Initiative

try operations attended the environmental awareness course here Wednesday.

The presentation was delivered by Rob Meinen, Penn State senior extension associate and Amy Van Blarcom of PennAg Industries.

According to Meinen, agriculture has been blamed for being a leading polluter of water in Pennsylvania, a situation that increasingly puts animal operations in the public spotlight and calls on producers to take the situation into their own hands as much as possible.

"Agriculture will be looked at more and more," Meinen said. "The people involved in agriculture, especially producers . . . are all moving in a direction that is self-regulated and compliant."

The PEACCE program offers certification to producers who demonstrate environmental awareness in their farming operations.

Now more than ever, producers must handle manure responsibly, minimize odors, and practice good community relations, Meinen told the group.

A former production specialist at a Bedford County farrowing operation, Meinen said that stewardship of the land and a positive public image are vital to the sustainability of farming operations.

Nutrient management is a central part of the PEACCE program. In order to be certified, producers must have an approved nutrient management plan, even if the state does not require one for their particular operation.

The PEACCE program was developed from various state and national inititatives already in effect, including an environmental program of the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) and Pennsylvania's own cooperative ombudsman project.

Administered in cooperation with PennAg Industries and the state's conservation districts, the ombudsman project helps resolve conflicts between agricultural producers and their communities.

As public liaison or "ombudsman," Van Blarcom said that a main goal of the PEACCE program is teaching producers how to respond to an environmentally concerned public.

"Even though (producers) are doing the right things, they need to let people know that," she said.

Van Blarcom said that the program offers a lot of information to producers to help them develop an increasingly positive public image.

Another benefit of PEACCE certification could be the lowering of liability insurance premiums required by banks, she said.

Cindy Frey, supervisor of a 1,400 sow farrow-to-feeder operation in Berks County, was one of the producers who attended Wednesday's meeting.

The PEACCE program continues work begun two years ago when the NPPC performed an environmental assessment of the operation Frey manages.

Frey said the PEACCE initiative will help give confidence to farm neighbors.

"It will let them see that we're taking a proactive stance," she said.

After the educational session, producers are required to pass a written exam demonstrating their environmental literacy and awareness.

The next step in the program is an on-farm environmental assessment conducted by ACWF.

The final step of certification will be conducted through a learned where the milkhouse is located on each farm, so the first stop is fill his bucket with water.

"Sometimes it's an adventure finding the farmer," said Dippel. "If they're busy or out working in the field, they may leave a note for me or put a sign above the cow they want me to look at. I could go to a few farms and not see anyone."

Most of the time, however, the farmers are present to assist the veterinarian, who often needs the extra pair of hands to either restrain the animal or help administer the treatment.

If the cow is newly fresh, she may be more susceptible to illness, said Dippel. A retained placenta after a difficult calving may be associated with milk fever, a situation he believes is the case on the first call at Merrill Bontrager's farm in Mount Joy.

Combating Milk Fever

A powder shaken over a milk or urine sample on a paper towel reveals whether an animal is ketotic if the crystals turn pink.

Ketosis, a metabolic disease related to the liver, is caused by a negative energy balance in the cow. The cow usually goes off of her feed with the illness or if it's severe, may exhibit odd behavior and even have trouble standing up.

At the Bontrager operation Dippel watches the diagnostic powder turn pink and recommends a bottle of dextrose, or sugar, to treat ketosis.

Adding calcium for milk fever will round out the treatment, so Dippel prepares to administer the I.V. carefully into the animal, since too much calcium too soon will stop her heart.

During the procedure he monitors the flow of medicines and the condition of her vein — all the time keeping a watchful eye on the movement of the cow.

"Once cows realize they are caught, they tend to give up," he said. "But I always have to be on my guard."

A scar over his eye from an injury sustained just weeks before his wedding last October is testament to an unguarded moment. Stephanie, who is now his wife, wanted him to wear a helmet on his calls during the last weeks before his wedding, recalled Dippel.

Preparing to leave a farm involves thoroughly washing the boots, instruments, and changing coveralls.

Water is essential to every call not only for treatment but also for sanitation. Dippel keeps a bottle of iodine handy and liberally administers it when he washes up. Not only does this protect the animals, notes Dippel, but is also sets a good example of biosecurity for the producers.

Dippel writes up the bill as soon as the visit is completed. He carefully records the services performed, medicine used, and medicines the farmer purchased.

At the next stop, the Risser farm in Hershey, Dippel fields questions about somatic cell counts while examining a cow. Her condition is less easily diagnosed, and Dippel finally recommends giving the animal a magnet to correct a possible hardware problem.

"Hardware disease" is unfortunately too common in the dairy industry, as the cows may consume metal or wires in the pasture or barnyard. In addition metal may be present in the animals' feed when trash in the fields is chopped with the forage, said Deb Risser.

Although he treats twisted stomachs year-round, the spring final assessment by the county conservation district.

Berks County conservation technician Karlyn Haas said that each of the three counties in the pilot project have a goal of certifying 10 farms this year.

"This is a really solid nationwide program," Haas said of ACWFs environmental assessment initiative.

The ACWF is a national, nonprofit organization created in 1989 to promote personal and community stewardship of water resources.

Haas said she received four days of training in preparation for conducting the final on-farm assessments and certifications.

PEACCE is sponsored by Penn State University, PennAg Industries Association, Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the State Conservation Commission.

Milk Marketing Board Sets New Over-Order Premium

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) Chairwoman Beverly R. Minor announced this week that the board voted unanimously for a $1.10 over-order premium to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers per hundredweight of the Class I milk (beverage) that is produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania. This premium will be effective for a period of six months beginning July 1. This action is the result of a public hearing held on May 16.

The current over-order premium of $1.40 ($1.65 including the fuel adjustment premium) is due to expire June 30. Testimony presented at the May 16 hearing indicated that production costs are level or declining slightly and the estimated price of milk to the producer is increasing. Historically, the board has decreased the over-order premium based on this current market condition. However, the board finds that there is a current market environment reflecting decreased milk supplies with higher demands for milk. According to the board, a decrease in the over-order premium of $.60 to $.85 per hundredweight as requested by two dairy industry representatives, respectively, could result in Pennsylvania producers being unable to rebound from last year's low milk prices and high production costs. Therefore, the board finds that the appropriate level of the over-order premium is $1.10 per hundredweight.

This action has no effect on the $.25 per hundredweight that was added to the current over-order premium to help offset the increase in fuel costs. Beginning July 1, the total over-order premium will be $1.35 per hundredweight.

The over-order premium is the dollar amount added to the minimum Class I price to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers that is announced by the federal government monthly. Since 1988, the PMMB has mandated that a premium be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for their Class I milk that is produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania. To date, the premium has generated an additional $233 million for Pennsylvania dairy farmers.

Southern Ohio Field Days Set

COLUMBUS, Ohio — People interested in the latest news and research in crop production should attend the Southern Ohio Agronomic Field Days, according to Jim O'Brien, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Fayette County office of Ohio State University Extension.

"There are always new advances and technologies in the marketplace, and this is a way to stay informed of what's going on in your area, O'Brien said.

The Southern Ohio Agronomic Field Days will be held at the Fayette County Farm, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., June 27-28. Speakers will include state specialists, industry researchers, and extension agents covering topics such as farm technology, weed control, corn health, soybean diagnostics, tillage practices, insect management, soil and water quality, and precision agriculture technology.

These field days provide practical, science-based information in an environment where producers and agribusiness people can engage in "hands-on" activities, ask questions on current and cutting-edge issues, and learn from specialists about common crop characteristics, O'Brien said.

June 27 is intended for farmers, while June 28 is geared toward agribusiness people. The same agenda will be covered both days, although the information on June 28 will be slightly more detailed and technical. All are welcome to attend either day, although each day is tailored for the particular professions, he said.

"Certified crop advisers will find this field day particularly enticing since we will offer the hard-to-find Nutrient Management and Soil and Water Management credit hours," he said.

Focus Attention To Calving Management

Michael O'Connor
Penn State
Dairy And Animal
Science Extension

Calving time is a critical period. Mismanagement during this time can endanger the immediate health of the cow, her calf, and adversely affect the cow's future reproductive performance. Many dairy producers have developed a system that insures prefresh and freshening cows are observed frequently and placed in a clean environment. However, in too many cases calving areas are unsanitary and stressful. What are the consequences?

In addition to exposing the calf to an unhealthy environment, the reproductive tract is most susceptible to infection during and after calving. One objective should be to minimize uterine contamination and exposure of the udder to mastitis organisms. Research has demonstrated that cows with severe uterine infection have at least a 12 percent reduction in first service conception rate compared to cows in the same herds without infection.

Similarly, cows with retained placenta have an eight percent reduction in conception rate compared to herd mates. Cattle that experience stress or problems during or shortly after calving are likely to develop ovarian cysts. Cows with ovarian cysts are more likely to have longer intervals to first service and reduced conception rate at that service. Finally, there is good evidence to suggest that episodes of clinical mastitis are associated with a higher incidence of embryonic death. If the environment during calving contributes to more mastitis, especially coliform mastitis, then reproduction is at risk.

Here are some points to consider when evaluating calving management:

- Cows should calve in a maternity pen reserved for calving that is dry and well bedded. If constructing new maternity pens, plan for excellent drainage for this area and a skid resistant surface.
- Maternity areas should be located in an area where employees will frequently observe these cows.
- Review with your veterinarian calving-assistance techniques and preliminary treatments for retained placenta and milk fever.
- Don't be in too much of a rush in providing assistance. Assistance should be given: if the cow fails to calve within two hours after the beginning of active labor; if the calf is too large for the pelvis; for abnormal presentation; or for prolonged, weak, ineffective labor.
- Avoid over conditioning during late lactation and during the dry period. Over-conditioned cows and heifers tend to have more calving problems, retained placenta, uterine infections, cystic ovaries and metabolic problems. Clean bedding, well designed pens, basic sanitary procedures and a balanced dry cow and transition ration are small investments for the major payback in cow performance.

Twilight Meeting June 21

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The New Holland Pesticide Twilight Meeting is scheduled Thursday, June 21, from 7 p.m.-9 p.m., at 723 S. Custer Ave.

This spring has been a challenging one for corn herbicides. The young farmer plots are no exceptions.

Sometimes we learn more from what doesn't work than we do from what does work.

This year's corn plots feature preemergent and some postemergent spray programs on corn. Bicep and Basis Gold will be featured. In soybeans, some Gauntlet (formerly Authority) preemergent treatments will be shown in conjunction with Roundup soybeans.

In addition, Del Voight from the Penn State Capitol Region Agronomy Team will be on hand to show the importance of good spray coverage. His spray table will show the importance of good nozzle care and selection.

Come out and talk to your fellow growers. Find out what other programs didn't work and what rescue options work best.

The meeting will offer two core and two category pesticide credits.

PEQAP Billboard Campaign To Make 806,500 Impressions

PHILADELPHIA — The Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP) launched a new advertising campaign in the Philadelphia area in May as a part of National Egg Month.

Over the next 6 months, the billboards will rotate and create 806,500 impressions to motorists and passengers along Philadelphia's busy highways. The billboards showcase the PEQAP logo on an egg carton and encourage people to look for the seal when they buy their eggs.

PennAg's Website is also listed for people to visit for more information. The campaign is made possible through a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture that is matched with industry funds.

Bills Prohibiting Destruction Of Crops Pass State House

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A two-bill package authored by Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. (R-147) designed to deter the destruction of crops grown for testing or research has passed the House.

"Research is crucial to agriculture, which is our top industry in Pennsylvania bringing in $44 billion in revenue a year," said Bunt, who chairs the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee. "While we haven't seen any significant level of crop destruction in Pennsylvania, we must keep our guard up."

The lawmaker noted that opponents of agricultural biotechnology have destroyed crops involved in private and public research field trials in order to advance their political agenda. Such destruction, he said, can set back the timetable of research projects, denying people the benefits resulting from crop research, including improved food quality and added economic value for farm families.

House Bill 1493 makes it a second-degree felony to intentionally damage any field crop grown for personal or commercial purposes, or for research or testing use by a public or private agency. Additionally, those convicted of such crop destruction could be ordered to pay restitution, attorney fees and court costs.

House Bill 1492 enables victims of agricultural crop destruction to pursue civil redress. Awards would be limited to three times the market value of the crop prior to its damage plus three times the actual damages for production research, testing, replacement and crop development costs.

Similar legislation was recently introduced in the New York Assembly by Agriculture Committee Chairman Bill Magee.

NCGA Hails Denial Of RFG Waiver For Calif.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) welcomes the apparent decision by the Bush Administration to deny California's request to opt out of the federal RFG (reformulated gasoline oxygen requirement). Although no official announcement has been made, NCGA believes the denial will be unconditional.

The administration's decision to deny the waiver is a milestone victory for the ethanol industry and for corn producers. NCGA's technical analysis — which provided the factual data to help secure this win — resulted from the cooperation between state corn grower checkoff boards and NCGA. The returns on that investment are apparent in this decision.

NCGA asserts this decision is an unequivocal validation of the technical arguments it has provided to the EPA during the last 18 months. NCGA's analysis determined that adding ethanol to California's gasoline would improve air quality and protect water resources.

Demand for ethanol in California will be approximately 580 million gallons annually. About 230 million bushels of corn will be used to produce the ethanol needed by California motorists. That amount of corn grind will boost corn prices by 10 to 15 cents per bushel, increasing the value of the nation's corn crop by as much as $1 billion.

Tim Hume, NCGA president-elect and a Walsh, Colo. farmer said, "The administration's denial of the waiver sends a clear message: The oxygen requirement is working and is necessary for clean air. Corn growers have received the 'green light' they have been waiting for, and are ready to make the investments needed to expand ethanol production."

Veal Farming

Schrock, who grew up on a dairy and hog farm in Quarryville, drew on her dairy experience when she decided to buy her own land 12 years ago.

"I knew I wanted to do something I could handle all by myself, and I can do that with veal. Also I was used to working with calves," she said.

"From the start, even before I built the barn, I investigated other barns and blueprints, then with the service representative decided on a barn design."

Although taking on her own operation was at first intimidating, Schrock is enjoying her work. Forgoing the security of raising calves under contract, she decided to become an independent operator. "I just felt that independent was the way to go," she said.

She enjoys being an independent producer because of the freedom it affords, although that freedom is balanced with the risk Schrock shoulders.

"But I do enjoy working with animals. I basically wanted to be in business on my own."

An Educational Experience

Schrock's barn holds 200 calves in four rooms. Two rows of 25 calves each stretch the length of the room. The calves are divided into two age groups.

Learning to raise veal calves has been "a challenge at times. I had to learn to know packers and keep watching the market, and decide what the profit margin will be with the babies so high."

For example baby, or bob calves, have sold from $1.60 to $2 a pound liveweight lately, with finished prices around $2.10 dressed weight, or $1.25 liveweight.

The East Coast is unique in that it is on the open market as compared to the contract prices given to producers by slaughterhouses in states further west.

Since the law of supply and demand applies to the veal industry as well as any other businesses, prices reflect the season. Traditionally September and October have seen the highest prices because of the Jewish holidays during that time.

In addition to keeping an eye on the market, "I'm still learning about the calves' health. There's always something new. I had to learn about treatments and medications, to cut back in feed when they're sick, and how the weather or ventilation will affect them."

The calves, though they are usually finished and processed at 19 weeks of age, can be held for a better market for two to three weeks. Schrock, however, usually calls the packer to schedule a time to ship the calves out several weeks prior to the 19-week mark.

A veal operation also requires a nutrient management program. Schrock empties the lagoon three times a year, which is spread on the neighbor's fields.

Calf Care

A shipment of three to seven-day-old bob calves means additional work for Schrock. The calves usually arrive from the sale barn at 10 or 11 p.m. from sale barns or buying station in Pennsylvania or New York.

Right away Schrock gives them warm water with electrolytes which is followed by milk replacer the next morning. Since the calves are unfamiliar with the buckets, she must teach them to drink.

"I usually have sore fingers around this time," she said. She eases the calve into the bucket idea by standing behind the calf and putting her fingers into its mouth, then gently putting their mouths into their milk to give them the right idea.

"They especially don't want to drink out of the bucket if they have suckled the cow," she said. However "by the third feeding I usually have all of them drinking out of the bucket."

Vaccinations are also on the list of first-day chores. Schrock gives the calves several assorted vitamin, iron, and vaccination shots.

Daily Routine

Beginning her day at 4:30 a.m., Schrock heads to the barn to feed the calves, a task which takes her approximately 2½ hours each time. She feeds one age group at a time to prevent spread of illness between the two groups. If she has sick calves, she will change clothes between the two groups.

Mixing one age group's milk replacer first, Schrock fills the tank with 150-160 degree water and milk replacer powder. The high temperatures more effectively break down the fats in the milk replacer, explained Schrock.

After she mixes the formula for three to five minutes, she adds cold water to bring the milk replacer to a feeding temperature of 102-103 degrees.

The warm milk replacer runs through a pipeline into the rooms. Shcrock fills each individual bucket through a hose and attachment, stopping when the milk level reaches the mark

Carrie Bomgardener, national Veal Issues Management coordinator, introduces son Alden to the veal industry at Schrock's farm.

Commonsense Calf Care

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The veal industry is the leading consumer of the dairy industry's two main by-products; whey, the main nutritional source for veal calves, and bull calves that are not merchandised in registered cattle markets.

Without the veal industry, there is little doubt at the price received for these by-products (whey, bull calves) would drastically go down. In essence the veal producer is yet another consumer to the dairy producer, just as the consumers who purchase fluid milk and dairy foods for their families.

1. Iodine navels thoroughly.
2. Give two quarts of colostrum within first two hours after birth.
3. Make sure the calves are three days of age or older before marketing.

Calf Management Recommendations

- After colostrum, feed calves a high quality milk replacer or milk that does not contain antibiotic residues.
- Only market calves that are at least three days of age or older, able to walk unassisted, are not wobbly, and have a dry navel.
- Handle calves carefully to reduce stress and prevent injury.
- Calves should move directly from the farm of origin to market and then to their final destination.

Signs Of Healthy Calves

- Dry navel, not swollen.
- Normal non-swollen joints, walks unassisted.
- Alert ears and bright, shiny eyes.
- Normal breathing, moist nose.
- Smooth, shiny hair coat.
- Good body condition, well muscled.
- No signs of diarrhea.
- Resumes a normal standing posture after getting up and stretching.

Signs Of An Ideal Calf Environment

- Clean, dry calving areas.
- Clean, sanitized, dry, well-ventilated, but draft free housing facilities.
- Availability of fresh, clean water.
- Limited, if any, exposure to older animals (to prevent transfer of disease organisms and parasites).

Calf Management Recommendations

- Have a comprehensive herd health program in place that includes: proper sanitation of facilities and equipment, close observation of cattle and an appropriate vaccination program.
- Dip navels in iodine as soon as possible after birth and continuing daily until navel is dry (seven percent) tincture of iodine is best).
- Provide high quality colostrum within two hours after birth and at least three times within the first 18 hours.

The Veal Quality Assurance Program is administered by The American Veal Association, 1500 Fulling Mill Road, Middletown, PA 17057. Phone (717) 985-9125.

Veal Production Fast Facts

Industry

- The American Veal Association, founded in 1984, represents approximately 1,300 family veal farmers, producers and affiliated industry personnel.
- The seven primary veal producing states — Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.
- Veal farmers purchase surplus dairy calves, primarily male Holstein calves, at about 100 pounds live weight and raise them for approximately 18-20 weeks, until they weigh upward of 475 pounds.
- A typical farm has 250 calves, cared for by a farm family.
- Special-fed veal represents a $650-$700 million industry.
- The special-fed veal industry contributes $250 million to the dairy industry through purchases of dairy-by-products and calves.

Diet

- Typical veal production sites are family-run operations that employ animal husbandry practices recommended by veterinarians and leading animal scientists. Those farms take advantage of modern technology and best management production practices.
- Veal calves receive diets designed to provide all of the 40 essential nutrients they need including important amino acids, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins.
- In the special-fed diet, research shows that calves must receive diets with iron to meet the animals' requirements for normal health and behavior. Nutritional standards are established by a number of government agencies and professional organizations.
- With a milk-based diet, special-fed calves remain pre-ruminant; once a calf is fed grain, the meat develops the strong flavor commonly associated with beef thanks to the rumination process. Fermentation in the rumen causes meat to change texture and flavor. The industry refers to grain-fed calves as "red-veal."

Housing

- Modern veal barns have artificial lighting overhead or receive natural sunlight through windows. Producers house their calves in properly lit barns to make it possible to monitor the calves regularly, to feed the animals and keep them clean. Typical veal barns are also heated during cold months and have year-round ventilation to provide clean, fresh air.
- Individual housing in a modern veal farm allows animals to receive their own feed, individual care and attention.
- Individual stalls maximize the quality of individual care farmers and veterinarians can give the calves. And first, and foremost, minimizing calf-to-calf contact is the best prevention against disease.
- The American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA), animal scientists and agricultural engineers have worked with the industry to develop specific guidelines for veal calf care and production. These guidelines support the practice of raising calves in individual housing stalls because it allows family farmers to carefully monitor and control the calf's nutritional and health status.
- Calves in individual housing can comfortably lay in a natural position, stand up, groom themselves and interact with their neighbors.
- In individual pens, calves can stretch without fear of other calves stepping on them. Group housing situations encourage competition from "boss" calves and a "pecking order" that stresses calves.
- Modern veal production utilizes as "all in/all out" standard — a biosecurity measure that limits the calves' exposure to disease.

Promotion For New Burger Sparks Excitement For Veal

DENVER, Colo. — Veal is now on the menus of more casual/theme restaurants, thanks to veal producer checkoff dollars and the joint veal committee of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA)/Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB).

For instance, a checkoff-funded promotion with a leading casual/theme restaurant is sparking new excitement about menu possibilities for veal.

The chef for Champps Americana, with almost 40-company-owned and franchised units in the U.S., created a new veal burger with veal bacon as a special item — and it became so successful that the chain put the item on its permanent menu.

Champps's Executive Chef Andre Halston created the veal burger with ground veal, crumbled veal bacon and sour cream-and-onion potato chips, and after nine months it became the chain's best selling burger item. It became part of the restaurant's permanent menu on April 23, 2001.

To give the burger additional visibility, the joint veal committee of NCBA/CBB and state beef councils will be providing promotional assistance to the restaurant, and will be running promotions to help further increase sales of the veal burgers.

Other objectives of the promotion, being conducted in August, are to introduce current veal users to a new, casual form of veal, as well as introduce veal to patrons who have never tried it.

Aggressive veal promotion tactics include incentives to encourage both waitstaff and store management to suggest veal burgers to their patrons and reward their support of this effort.

Fourteen state beef councils, working cooperatively with the veal committee, are also supporting the promotion through increased publicity and awards given by "secret diners."

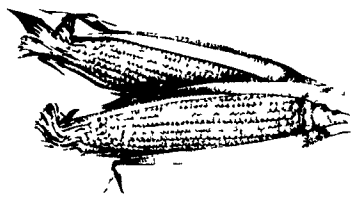
U.S. Corn Leaders On Joint Mission To Europe

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — During a joint mission to Europe, the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the U.S. Grains Council (USGC) will work to bridge the gap between the U.S. and Europe on issues surrounding biotechnology and move beyond the current trade stalemate, say the top officials from the two organizations.

USGC President Ken Hobbie explained the Council's motivation in organizing the trip for corn grower leaders. "As the export market development arm of the U.S. corn industry, we recognize that the current impasse on biotechnology serves no one. So we're fielding a team to Europe to help build relationships and promote ongoing, constructive engagement between the U.S. grain industry and interested European groups and governments," he said

NCGA Executive Vice President and CEO Rick Tolman said that the corn growers participating in the mission plan to talk and to listen. "We want to assess the current status of the biotech debate in Europe and gain a better understanding of how biotechnology is viewed by European consumers, agricultural groups, governments, importers and others," he said. "Also, we want to assess the prospects of the European Union (EU) resuming a biotech approval process and re-energizing trade.

"At the same time, we're also going to clarify the responsible and positive attitude of U.S. corn growers towards biotech and explain the benefits that this technology can provide for farmers, consumers and society," said Tolman.



Besides Tolman, the joint NCGA-USGC delegation will consist of Lee Klein, NCGA president and farmer from Battle Creek, Neb.; Fred Yoder, NCGA Biotechnology Working Group chairman and Plain City, Ohio farmer; Leon Corzine, NCGA Biotechnology Working Group member and farmer from Assumption, Ill.; David McGuire, USGC director of trade relations and global strategies; and Ellen Dougherty, USGC director of communications.

During stops in Brussels, Rotterdam, Geneva and Paris, they will meet with representatives of the European Commission, the World Trade Organization and the two bodies' member countries, as well as private groups representing both pro- and anti biotech positions.

Following the mission, participants will work together to develop recommendations for a more active biotechnology strategy for the U.S. grain industry in Europe and elsewhere.

"The knowledge that is gathered and the relationships that are developed on this trip will help us to make informed decisions about future programs and activities," Hobbie noted.

Tolman concluded, "This will be a great opportunity for U.S. farmers to talk directly with European customers, identify their concerns and start clearing up any lingering issues on biotechnology. We're looking forward to discussions that can be beneficial to all parties."

Veal Farming

on the nozzle.

Every three weeks blood samples are taken to determine if the calves have high or low iron levels. The calves may receive an iron shot to boost immune levels if they are low.

Since light-colored pink meat is the preferred color for veal, iron levels, which color the meat red, are carefully monitored. Calves need iron to maintain their health, appetite, body functions, and reisit challenges. However excess iron is stored in the tissue, making it dark, so producers attempt to strike the balance.

In addition to iron levels, Schrock checks the navels for infection upon arrival as well as one week later.

When the calves are younger, the iron levels may be higher but are bought down as they mature.

In addition to iron levels, "I really watch their respiratory health," said Schrock. Air flow and humidity levels are important to calf health. "Veal growers really watch the air flow, whether it's stuffy or the air is whipping around you, or it's a nice even air flow."

To further control the environment further, last year Schrock installed a cooling system. The new sprinkler system will turn on and off automatically. In the winter the rooms are heated to 66 degrees.

At the packers the calves receive a grade from one to three, with one being the best. Producers can receive premiums for a consistent lot or be docked for calves which are bruised or under a specific weight. For Schrock, the animals' live weight averages 480-490 pounds and dressed weight 280 pounds.

Role Of The Service Technician

"Veal growers depend on a service representative," said Schrock. These representatives help monitor herd health, give feed and medicine recommendations, take the calves' blood samples for analysis, and act as a liaison from producer to packer.

Daryl Heisey is service technician for Real Veal Feed, Inc., a division of Alto Dairy Cooperative in Wisconsin.

As a field representative Heisey checks in at Schrock's operation twice a month, along with producers in the western New York and northern half of Pennsylvania.

"My job is to represent producers and help them produce a product that ultimately the consumer is satisfied with, that is safe, wholesome, and delicious," he said. Since he connects farmers and packers, he avoids aligning himself with one packer and works with several different operations to serve the best interests of the producer.

Formula for the baby calves, explained Heisey, is higher in protein in the beginning stages because "we want higher protein in the beginning to build the structure of the calf.

"At the end we want to fatten that animal. If we would put a fat covering on the calf at 10 weeks, the physiology would change and it would stop growing. We build frame first, then finish the calf."

The milk replacer components change from 22 to 16 percent protein in the growth cycle. The fat content, explained Heisey, increases to 18 percent to finish the calves.

The replacer is made up of milk by-products such as whey and whey protein concentrate, both byproducts of the cheese industry. Although alternative proteins have been tested and used, "we're still using all milk products," said Heisey. "It's much more desirable in taste and performance results."

As for marketing, "most Pennsylvania calves are processed in the Philadelphia and New Jersey area," said Heisey.

"A large part of the veal eaten is consumed in the area between Boston and Baltimore because of the high ethnic population."

The majority of his job, said Heisey, is monitoring production in the veal facilities, "helping people with the challenges in veal production. That could be barn management, procuring babies, or marketing calves."

Heisey, who has his own veal operation, has been in the veal production business for 18 years and working with producers for 14 years as a serviceman.

Industry Changes

The last 10 years has brought changes in both the production and marketing ends of the veal business. "Stalls have gotten larger, and producers are using new ventilation techniques," he said.

One reason for increased stall size is that calves are now bigger than ever because of packer and consumer demand. Calf size has moved from 250 to 290 pounds as restaurants and consumers ask for larger loins.

Natural enhances for immunity and performance have also begun to make a mark on the veal industry. Antibiotics are being replaced with more naturally-based products, said Heisey.

Other changes include a closer eye on individual calves. "As margins decrease and we need to maximize the potential of each calf, there is much more blood profiling so we can eliminate the deficiencies of each calf."

Additionally the national Veal Quality Assurance Program has helped producers become more cognizant of, and put at the forefront of their minds, proper procedures and protocols. According to Heisey, residue level in veal is the lowest of meat proteins.

Other changes include a decrease of production from fringe areas such as Mississippi, Virginia, and Vermont. Production is now concentrating in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Decreased margins over the last five years have forced producers to become more efficient, to diversify, or find an off-farm job — unfortunately the story of many agricultural enterprises.

TAKING CARE OF YOUR YARD TREES THIS SUMMER

Dr. Robert S. Hansen
Extension Forester

Summer can be a very stressful time for trees in your yard. They can be attacked by insects, suffer from lack of water, endure people "abuse," and develop "lawnmower disease" (when lawn mowers or weed eaters hit the stem and damage the inner bark of the tree). There are things that homeowners should and shouldn't do to help their trees this summer.

One of the most helpful things a homeowner can do to help their trees is to mulch around the tree. For best results, mulch should cover the area at no less than a two-foot radius from the trunk. The best would be to mulch to the "drip line" (if you were standing at the drip line of a tree during a rain, half of you would be getting wet from the rain and the rest of you would be under the tree's crown). The mulch should be no more than three to four inches deep. Keep the mulch away from the stem. Mulch right up against the stem can be a great place for insects and diseases to "hang out."

Before mulching your tree you may want to carefully remove the sod from around the tree (this is not a requirement and it may be difficult with mature trees). Water the tree and then apply the mulch. Avoid using sawdust or leaves. Shredded bark mulch is best. Mulch will help keep down weeds, maintain soil moisture, and will serve as a barrier to protect the tree from lawn mowers and weed eaters.

Once you have applied the mulch, avoid planting flowers or other plants in the mulched area. One of the reasons you apply mulch is to reduce weed growth. The flowers you plant in the mulch become weeds to the tree.

It is very important to provide sufficient water during the hot, dry months of summer. When it is hot, dry, and windy trees use a tremendous amount of water. We can supply some of their needs during hot and dry periods. Mulch will help conserve soil moisture.

The amount of water to give a tree depends on the soil type and the length of time since the last measurable rain. If it has been hot with no significant rainfall for a week, it is time to water your tree.

Trees growing on sandy or gravelly, excessively drained soil will need heavier waterings at more frequent intervals than will trees growing on soils with more silt and clay. Too much water on the poorer drained soils can be just as damaging as not enough water.

Soils high in silt and clay will need to be watered less heavily than sandy soils. For best results, use a hose and allow the water to run slowly onto the soil. Apply water at the "drip line." Many of the smaller feeder roots are found out toward the drip line and they are relatively close to the soil surface. Move the hose all around the tree.

For larger trees, once you have watered around the drip line, move the hose about one fourth of the way from the drip line to the stem and water slowly again. The general rule is to give the tree the equivalent of about 1 inch of water. How this is applied will vary based on soil type.

For smaller and younger trees, you can water on the mulched area. It is very important that trees planted this year get the correct amount of water. Be careful not to over water.

As a general rule, you should avoid pruning your tree during the summer months. For most species, it is better to prune your tree during the dormant season. There are exceptions, however.

You should never "top" (often called pollarding) your tree. This will lead to weaker branches and will lead to the eventual decline and possibly the premature death of your tree.

If a tree needs to be reduced in height, there are pruning methods that can be used to correctly reduce the height and maintain the tree's health.

You should not fertilize your tree during the hot summer. Most fertilizers are salts and these salts can draw water away from plant roots. If your tree needs to be fertilized, it should be done in the spring or fall. You should use a special tree fertilizer. These are generally tablets that are slow release and low salt fertilizers.

Do not use your tree as a post to which to tie a pet such as a dog. Your pet will likely run around and pull at the rope or chain. This can rub off the protective outer bark and expose or directly damage the inner bark.

You should also avoid using your tree as a pole for your clothesline or as a fence post. If these wires or cables are not removed the tree will actually grow around them and "strangle" itself. This can damage or even kill an otherwise healthy tree.

For more information on helping your trees through the summer, call the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Bradford County at (570) 265-2896 or email the office at BradfordExt@psu.edu.

Polled Hereford Donated From Manatawna-Saul 4-H Club

BENSALEM (Bucks Co.) — Don and Nance Stelow, owners of Maple Springs Farm in York Springs have donated an 8-month-old Hereford heifer to Krista Moser. Krista, 11-years-old, is a member of the Manatawna-Saul 4-H Club.

The heifer was presented to Krista at the Pennsylvania Fair held in Bensalem. Samuel E. Hayes Jr., Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture, and Michael Firestine, president of the Pennsylvania Hereford Association, were on hand to present the gift to Krista.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Moser and a student at the William Levering Middle School in Philadelphia, Krista plans to attend W.B. Saul High School.

She plans to show her heifer at the Philadelphia Fair, Junior Preview Show in Bedford, the Hereford Junior National in Billings, Mont., the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, Harrisburg, and the Pennsylvania Farm Show, Harrisburg.

President of the Pennsylvania Hereford Association Michael Firestine, Womelsdorf, sees this program as an opportunity to give the young women and men in 4-H the opportunity to own a heifer. This was the first year for the Pennsylvania Hereford Association's Heifer Program.

Mr. Firestine, who hopes the program will continue, feels that "the youth are our future in agriculture. What better way is there to excite young women and men about agriculture than to give them a chance to own a Hereford heifer."

and fall — when most cows freshen — are the seasons when Dippel most often hears the unmistakeable "ping" of a twisted stomach, or displaced abomasum (DA). A DA results when of one of the four parts of the stomach, the abomasum, slips out of place, ususally up high on the left side of the abdomen.

With his stehoscope pressed against the cow's side, he flicks her side with his index finger to diagnoses the animal by listening for the familiar sound. The telltale "ping" is caused by the interface between gases and fluid inside the abomasum, said Dippel.

Many of the DAs occur just after the cow has freshened, when she is going through a time of stress and more prone to diseases. During this time, explained Dippel, her physiology is changing from pregnancy to milking.

"Her body is going through a major transition," he said.

Causes Of DAs

One theory links the dry period with the occurrence of a twisted stomach.

"If the cow is stressed during the dry period, she may have health problems when she freshens," he said. "Since cows that freshen in the spring are dry in summer, when she may not be eating as much because of the heat, she may have more problems when she freshens."

Dippel encourages produces to "really manage the cow during that time period. Make her as comfortable as possible in the dry period. Make sure she's on a proper dry cow ration. It sets up the whole lactation."

The prefresh days, especially, are important to a cow's health. "Do everything possible to make sure she eats, especially in the three weeks before she freshens," he said.

At the Clair Oberholtzer farm in Elizabethtown, instead of a twisted stomach Dippel finds that the cow simply has metabolic problems. He opts to force-feed the cow that has been off of her feed for two days.

Pumping her stomach is the procedure of choice to force feed the cow. The electrolytes, dried whey, alfalfa meal, and yeast boluses in the water put the necessary nutrients into the animal so she does not get a twisted stomach.

"If don't eat they don't get the vitamins, minerals, and sugar they need," he said. This leads to more serious health problems. "It's a vicious cycle," said Dippel.

Since Oberholtzer's cow is ketotic and not eating, Dippel hopes she does not eventually end up with a DA. "Any cow that goes off feed for any reason can get a twist," he said.

The twist can be the primary reason why she is off feed, but it may also be a result of something else make her to go off feed, causing the twist. When a cow is not eating the rumen shrinks, making it possible for the abomasum to slip underneath and twist.

At the Rohrer farm, Dippel examines a first-calf heifer just over a difficult calving. Because of the calving, he said, the uterus adhered to the pelvis, which will make her difficult to breed back.

The farmers and Dippel discuss heifer prices and the value of the animal as they decide treatment options, proving the all-around knowledge Dippel must have of agriculture.

They finally settle on the proper treatment and decide to milk her out for the rest of the lactation before culling her from the herd.

The Toggle Method

The second cow does have a twisted stomach. Since she is older the farmers opt for the "toggle" treatment, a relatively new procedure, instead of the more expensive surgery. Dippel gives the cow an injection into the tail area and in one minute the animal's eyes and ears begin to droop with drowsiness.

As her whole body begins to sway he "casts" the cow by twining a rope across her body, and drops her. They work to secure her on her back, a position which brings her gas-filled stomach, which began on the left side of her body, to the highest point and back into the proper position.

Dippel punches a hollow metal trochar into the stomach wall, sniffs for the telltale abdominal gas, then places the t-bars through the instrument. The bars, along with the string which holds the bars to the body wall, will secure the stomach in position to the body wall.

The ensuing infection will form a scar — actually necessary in this case — to keep the stomach in place after the strings are cut. Dippel instructs the farmer to take her temperature every day and give her antibiotics if necessary.

The signalling beeper draws Dippel's attention as he receives another call, extending his day and proving again that flexibility is a defining characteristic of veterinarians.

Ag Symposium: Tools To Make Ag Profitable

berg. There are over 100 active ag research projects taking place funded by revenue from PDA."

Hayes spoke earlier Thursday morning at an Ag Issues Forum breakfast at the PDA building. He gave expenditure updates, noting that construction is slated to begin this fall at the livestock evaluation center and renovations and additional equine center at the Farm Show complex.

During the meeting Hayes also handed out several pieces of literature to the 35 agriculture representatives. The brochures and booklets highlighted Pennsylvania's ag economy for possible importers, gave information on the legal aspect of exporting agricultural products, and identified export opportunities for Pennsylvania producers.

Export, Ultrasonography, Plum Pox Research

Export opportunities and barriers was the first 10-minute presentation. Thomas Slane, chair of the agribusiness department at Delaware Valley College, reported about the work of the team of researchers who conducted a survey to identify barriers to exporting products, the beginning steps of addressing these obstacles.

The project is applicable to all agriculture products, said Slane, and the research could expand or open export market opportunities. Slane also spoke of the research leading to the development of an international agricultural marketing center.

Keith Bryan of Penn State presented information about the work completed in the early stages of a project testing ultrasonography of livestock. "We're in the equipment acquisition phase," said Bryan, noting that the main unit arrived Friday a week ago.

A goal of the project was to purchase the most technologically advanced equipment available and eventually have a certified ultrasound technician available in Pennsylvania.

Eventually the team hopes to be able to make the technologies and certified technicians available for youth projects and commercial producers of meat in Pennsylvania.

The equipment will perform ultrasonography on performance-tested bulls, rams, and boars at the center in Penn State.

The unit will also be able to give producer sire and progeny data for genetic evaluations, besides detect intramuscular fat or measure the ribeye area.

"Livestock breeders could use the information immediately after they get it to make selection decisions on breeding stock," said Bryan. "It's a non-invasive assessment of reproductive tissue to examine reproductive efficiency or perform a pregnancy check or a fetal exam."

Plum pox virus is at the center of research conducted by Fred Gildow of the department of plant pathology at Penn State.

The virus decreases fruit quality, yields, and eventually causes death of trees. Spread by aphids, the virus caused the loss of 1,250 acres of eradicated trees last year.

The goals of Gildow's study included identifying aphid species that occur in Pennsylvania orchards. He believes there may be up to 25 different species of the insect.

Secondly, researchers studying which aphids can transmit the virus so control strategies can be more closely targeted.

Additionally researchers are working to identify plant hosts and discover if virus may infect wild or ornamental species and serve as a reservoir. Also they are developing in vitro cultures to be used for testing.

Johne's Disease A Focus

Dan Weinstock, a diagnostic pathologist at the Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Lab, presented information about Johne's disease, a chronic bacterial infection which results in diarrhea and wasting of cattle. The disease is also found in goats, sheep, bison, elk, and deer.

Johne's is a challenge to producers because 95 percent of infected cattle show no symptoms until they are terminal, said Weinstock.

A highly infected dairy goat herd undergoing the eradication process serves as a forum for Weinstock's study. The animals can be used as a model for the Why Be Sick And Tired?

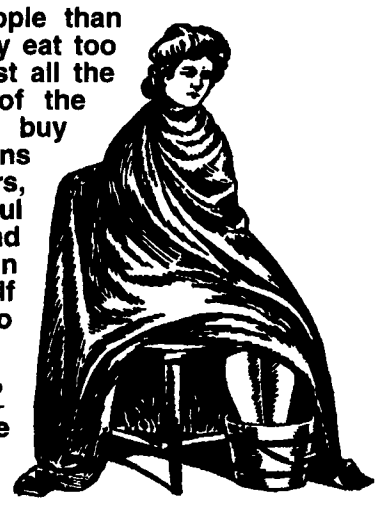
America has more sick people than most countries, because they eat too much cooked food which lost all the enzymes and up to 80% of the nutrition. Most food you buy contains harmful toxins because they use weed killers, insecticides and many harmful chemicals in growing it, and then more chemicals in processing to increase shelf life. But there is a solution to the problem.



Be Healthy And Energetic?

May doctors and people are now using a new and safer way to remove toxins and poisons from the body, clean out the arteries and develop a strong immune system so it can fight off diseases with amazing results, without any drugs. This program supplies the immune system with killer cells, memory and suppresser cells activity and training, which is like manpower and equipment to any army. It provides the immune system with all natural, organically grown fruit, grain and vegetables" which is like good food and ammunition to an army.

Over 40 million dollars were spent in research, and over 3000 sheets of scientific documented studies by doctors supports many positive clinical experiences, and backs up the patented process in providing proven products. The cost is considerable less than drugs, chelation, radiation, chemotherapy and operations. It does NOT interfere with medication. There are now viruses that can not be stopped with antibiotics, but these all natural products are producing excellent results with supervision from doctors.

Over 3000 Doctors Have Already Switched

They have switched from drugs to alternative medicine in order to help people recover from cancer, heart attacks, arthritis diabetes, lupus, fibromyalgia, allergies, fatigue and many other health problems without any side effects. We make no health claims. We work with doctors in giving the body all natural food grade products it needs to heal itself. There is also a Prevention Program to help you from getting sick. "An ounce of prevention costs far less, and is so much better than a pound of cure" (doctor and hospital bills). Which would you prefer, $149 a year to help prevent a heart attack, or a $50,000 by pass operation? The choice is yours. Let us try to help you prevent health problems.

disease in cattle.

Researchers are working to identify the diseases at the early stages of infection, so Weinstock's team is working to identify the more sensitive technology to detect the lower numbers of bacteria present in the early stages. Improving diagnosis of the disease in cattle the early detection the fast the control of the disease.

"If we can improve our diagnostic techniques we can lower the time to eradicate it from the herd," said Weinstock. Currently eradication from the herd takes five to seen years. Weinstock has worked on his study for six months.

Robert Whitlock, from the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, gave some of his findings of three years of work on improving diagnosis of Johne's disease. Better tests are needed, said Whitlock, since current tests are unable to pick up the disease in its earlier stages.

Whitlock and his collaborators worked to develop more and better ELISA tests, along with a tip-test which veterinarians can perform in their office.

Additionally the team worked to developed improved techniques such as DNA probe and culture to detect Johne's in fecal samples. Other research included developing a test for pooled fecal samples to test cattle herds of five or ten samples pooled together.

Although a vaccine for Johne's exists, it is ineffective, said Raymond Sweeney, who is working to perfect the vaccine. Since $1 billion is lost annually because of Johne's in the U.S., "certainly we have the financial incentive to control this costly disease," said Sweeney.

Researchers have decided to move the current vaccine, which is given subcutaneously in the neck area, to administering it in the lymph node in the intestinal area. "The vaccine fails because it is not stimulating the immune response in the right tissue," he said.

Researchers are also testing the results of administering the vaccine orally.

Reducing, Deodorizing, Or Characterizing Swine Slurry

George Preti opened the lineup of projects that dealt with reducing swine slurry odor. Preti's team's objective was to identify the compounds responsible for the offensive odors in swine slurry. The team used many technologies to quantify the odors, he said.

Using powder activated charcoal (PAC), the team found, reduced the odors in the lab, however, it may have an economic drawback. The team has been able to link malodors to specific compounds, so they tried feeding the animals different types of materials to perhaps bind the sulfides and organic compounds in the animal. Using the feed additives and PAC worked the best to reduce odor, said Preti.

Paul Pitcher, assistant professor of swine health at the University of Pennsylvania, spoke about the sulfur-bearing compounds, organic acids, cresole, skatole, and indole which create swine slurry odors. Making control difficult is that may of these compounds are highly volatile and can travel large distances.

Pitcher's study objective was to test the effectiveness of diet manipulation and feed additives. Feeding PAC, said Pitcher, would cost a producer from $5 to $7 a day per hog. Pitcher plans to conduct on on-farm study and bring odor panelists to a farm for further testing and evaluation of odors.

Eileen Wheeler's group went about reducing odor from another angle as they looked at manure on-site and built a ventilation system with a biofilter option. By blowing air or straining the slurry through a simple bark bed, odor was reduced significantly said Bruns.

These "constructed wetlands" also provide the farmer with less manure to haul through the field.

The low-cost wetland system is in a greenhouse so it can operate year-round. The setup has already received interest from a commercial pork producer, said Wheeler.

Mary Ann Bruns, assistant professor of agronomy at Penn State, also investigated the deodorization of livestock manure. Brun's research slant was to study mixing microorganisms with the swine slurry. Lab tests isolate and mix a few of the hundreds of varieties of microorganism and capture emanated gases.

Dr. David Wagner, an ag engineering professor at Penn State, presented his team's research on optimizing the anaerobic digestion process of swine slurry.

The problem of manure generation, which yields nutrients such as nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium, was the focus of his study. The solution, said Wagner, is anaerobic digestion, which controls odor, generates energy, and manages nutrients.

Converting one third of the manure generated in Pennsylvania has the energy equivalent of about six billion gallons of gas, said Wagner.

Phosphorus Overload

Zhengxia Dou, from the University of Pennsylvania, presented about her work with phosphorus solubility. Adding chemicals to phosphorus could possible make the phosphorus less soluble. Phosphorus is in excess in much of Pennsylvania's soils.

However "the phosphorus is still there," said Dou. "The ultimate goal is to reduce phosphorus excretion." She believes that phosphorus in the diet could be decreased greatly without a decrease in milk yield.

In the same vein, William Roush, associate professor of poultry science at Penn State, presented his project which researched strategic feed formulation for nutrient management with the intention of "cutting the nutrients off at the pass" by changing the animals' diet.

Ration formulation is a "risk problem," said Roush. "You need to meet the animals' needs but don't want to lose the nutrients to the environment," said Roush. Ration formulations are recipes, and Roush spoke about using stochastic programming, which takes into consideration the variability of agriculture products, to meet animal requirements with measured certainty.

Professor of Ag Economics at Penn State, Stephen Smith introduced the economic and fiscal impacts of Pennsylvania agriculture with Penn State's Community Impact Model (CIM-PSU). The objective is to establish the economic impact such as jobs, income, output, tax revenue, and public service provided by Penn State.

The model analyzes the income of agriculture activities to help authorities make decisions concerning population or zoning changes.

NASS
Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

YOU MAY HAVE SEEN OUR NUMBERS

Editor's Note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

Most folks see or hear about our statistics and never realize that NASS or the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service is the source of the numbers. These days everyone uses statistics to make their point or promote their cause. Our cause is agriculture.

Our data is public information so we don't have to be credited as the source. Often our data is only credited to "USDA" and the agency name is never mentioned.

You have probably seen or heard NASS numbers in articles in agricultural magazines and newspapers, talks or reports from extension specialists and other educators, grower association or cooperative meetings and conferences, publications and handouts from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) or Penn State, pamphlets from chambers of commerce promoting agriculture, or speeches from various leaders of Pennsylvania agriculture.

So by helping us with our surveys, you are helping yourselves to have accurate information that is used in these ways and many more that I will review another time.

U.S. Cattle Counted

Cattle inventories, births, and deaths are measured twice a year — January and July. In July, only about 9100 of the largest cattle operations (including dairies) are contacted nationwide to help establish official statistics at the national level (110 in Pennsylvania)

The January survey includes many more farms from Pennsylvania and across the nation to provide enough detail to publish statistics for Pennsylvania and other states.

The results of the survey can be found at www.usda.gov/nass/. Use the Search button to find the "Cattle" report issued July 20.

Crop Yields Forecasted

From May to November, NASS publishes the official USDA yield and production forecasts for the major field crops and tree fruits in Pennsylvania and around the country. Forecasts are based on responses to periodic fruit surveys and monthly Ag Yield Surveys when farmers estimate expected yields from their own fields.

We ask growers because they are the best source of information about the crops they grow. They see the crop develop daily and they have the best idea of how the weather is affecting their crop. Using their years of experience, they can make the best estimate of their expected yields based on current crop conditions.

It is too risky to use weather predictions when setting yield forecasts.

Forecasts are based on information from farmers who must assume that average conditions will prevail through the end of the season. Potential lower yields from drought, flood, or other poor growing conditions are reflected in the following month's yield survey.

Each month we ask about different crops, depending on their stage of growth.

In Pennsylvania, we usually ask 200-450 growers for their help with each monthly survey. These crops include winter wheat, barley, oats, corn for grain, soybeans, sorghum, hay, hay stocks, apples, peaches, pears, and cherries.

These production forecasts give an important advance warning of the size of each crop in Pennsylvania and across the nation. For example, if a large crop is expected, contract harvesters, packers, transportation companies and storage facilities must be ready to handle the extra volume. A small crop warns about the possible need to plan for alternate livestock feed sources or farmer assistance programs such as the 1999 Drought Assistance Program.

The results of field crop and fruit yield surveys can be found at www.usda.gov/nass/. Use the Search button to find the "Crop Production" report issued around the 10th of each month and the "Cherry Production" report scheduled for June 21.

'Thank You' To Farmers

Most growers take the time to complete NASS surveys. Your help lets us generate timely, accurate, and useful statistics in service to Pennsylvania and U.S. agriculture. Thanks again.

Remember, by federal law, your name and address and data about your operation are completely confidential. The same law also protects your individual responses from requests under the Freedom of Information Act. Also by law, no one can gain early access to the results of any NASS survey. The reports are available to everyone at the same time through www.usda.gov/nass/.

Time To Evaluate Crop Stands

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The time to check stands to estimate harvest yields is now. By checking now, one can determine what caused stand problems or decide whether to replant all together.

With beans, the goal is 150,000 plants per acre (ppa); with corn it is 25-30,000 ppa. These figures represent final stands that are even and uniform, indicating same day germination and subsequent emergence. By determining ppa, you can see how well you were able to get crops up and now is the time to find out why things are low, high, or in between. Between the planter, tillage, pests, and weather, take control of the items you can.

For more information about evaluating crop stands, contact Del Voight, Penn State extension agent for Lebanon County, or your local extension agent.

Noses Needed For Smell Study

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

PHILADELPHIA — After all the scientific experiments, test tubes, and samples collected, there is only one more way left to study the odors emitted from a swine operation.

Hire noses.

A team of investigators from Monell Chemical Senses Center and the Univeristy of Penn School of Veterinary Medicine, New Bolton Center have conducted a study on pig farm odors for approximately two years with the goal of mitigating the offensive smell of pig operations.

Now researchers have moved into another phase of the study, which includes an experiment conducted on-farm.

"Usually samples are collected and brought back to Philadelphia. We've never done anything like this before," said Jennifer Louie, research technician who is recruiting participants and coordinating the testing procedures.

Sensory evaluators are needed to complete the research. Participants will be trained to evaluate, rate, and put on a scale smells to they conduct tests on the farm and in field operations.

The team of researchers will conduct 13 one-hour sessions from June 22 to July 27. Pay is $30 per session, which includes travel time and costs.

The project is "in-depth," according to Louie. Investigators recently traveled to Florida to present their study findings to companies, private citizens, and government officials involved in chemical senses.

"The smell up close (in samples) is different than the smell in the actual environment, so we want to see how they perceive it in real life in normal concentrations," she said.

"We're trying to see what makes it smell less offensive and then look for the best, most cost-effective solutions to lessen the smell," she said.

Sample experiments have yielded results in lessening the smell but may prove to be costly in real-life situations, said Louie.

The test farm is tentatively scheduled for the Lancaster area.

According to project supervisor at the Monell Chemical Senses Center, Charles J. Wysocki, the non-profit research institute is located in Philadelphia, next to the University of Pennsylvania. Additionally the Monell team is working with Penn State on odor problems associated with mushroom farming/composting.

Call Jennifer Louie at (215) 898-7797 or send an e-mail to wysocki+Amonell.org for more information.

Franklin County Graziers Plan Field Day

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.) — The Franklin County Graziers will host a summer pasture walk and grazing program at Cove Mt. Farm in Mercersburg, Thursday, June 28. Participants will have the opportunity to tour Cove Mt. Farm and learn about seasonal grass-based dairy management. Farmer members of the Franklin County Graziers will be on hand to share their experiences and discuss the 2001 grazing season.

The program will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., with a complimentary box lunch served at noon. The afternoon speaker will be Ron Geck, an experienced dairy grazier and grass-based consultant from Cambridge, New Zealand. Greek will share his perspectives on dairy grazing and discuss how a New Zealand dairy grazier might go about making milk on grass here in the U.S.

Participants are invited to stay after the program for afternoon milking in Cove Mt. Farm's 16-unit swing parlor. Advance registration for this event is not required, however, complimentary box lunches will be available only to those who call to make a reservation by June 26.

Program co-sponsors include American Farmland Trust, Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture, Pennsylvania Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative, USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service, USDA-ARS Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Research Unit and Central Susquehanna Chapter of Project Grass.

Agriterrorists Targeted By Pa. Legislation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — People who intentionally damage agricultural crops, livestock or research materials could face criminal and civil penalties under legislation passed recently by the House of Representatives.

"We're united in saying loud and clear that Pennsylvania will not tolerate so-called agriterrorism. Because agriculture is so important to the state's economy, we must do everything we can to ensure the well-being of the industry's future, including research products," said Rep. Peter J. Daley, D-Fayette/Washington, Democratic chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

"Agriterrorists" destroy research crops and other materials in an effort to hamper engineering and biotechnology projects.

In offering amendments to the two-bill package, Daley worked with his Republican counterpart, Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr., who sponsored the measures, to expand the legislation to include all types of agricultural research materials, in addition to the field crops addressed by Bunt's bills.

"The fact of the matter is, there's more to agriculture these days than just field crops. The industry has progressed to the point of relying on important research programs which have been targeted by protesters, as evidenced recently by the building fire in the state of Washington," Daley said.

In the final version passed by the House, one of the bills (H.B. 1493) would make it a second-degree felony to intentionally damage a field crop, vegetable, fruit, tree, livestock, research materials or equipment. Penalties could be up to 10 years in prison and a $25,000 fine. Those convicted also could be ordered to pay restitution, attorney fees and court costs.

The other measure (H.B. 1492) would allow victims of agriterrorism to pursue civil penalties. Awards could be up to triple the market value of the product, plus triple the replacement cost.

To alleviate concerns that the new penalties are too harsh, Daley also expanded the state's current agricultural vandalism statute to include buildings and research materials. Pennsylvania presently has a graded penalty scale for agricultural vandalism, based on the amount of damage done.

"By creating this expanded definition, prosecutors will have an option of whether to charge the offender with agricultural vandalism or the more serious crime of agricultural destruction," Daley said. "Again, making sure that people understand that we're serious about protecting our vast array of agricultural research facilities."

Both bills have been referred to the Senate for consideration.

Seven Gardens On Ohio Tour July 15

MARYSVILLE, Ohio - Seven Union County gardens will be highlighted on the Ohio State University Extension Union County Master Gardeners fifth annual Union County Tour of Gardens.

The event will be July 15 from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. The tour will feature colonial gardens, perennial gardens, native and invasive plants, landscape ponds, vermicomposting, and beekeeping. The tour will also include skin cancer screenings and raffle and door prizes. Master gardeners and garden homeowners will be on hand at each location to answer questions, and each garden will feature a demonstration and/or live entertainment. The tour will be conducted regardless of weather.

The following gardens will be featured on the tour:

• Linda and Phil Shandle, 14458 Fladt Road: transformed their rural farm fields into extensive perennial and vegetable gardens surrounding an 1840s milkshed that was purchased at an auction and moved to the property.

• Robert and Cynthia Robinson, 12587 Adams Road: started beekeeping on their farm in 1994. Visitors will see 20 colonies of honeybees and the vegetable and fruit gardens that surround them. A demonstration on beekeeping will be presented as well as honey recipes.

• Becky Rowe, 21914 Westlake Lee Road: has created a garden from scratch in just three years. Her focus is on keeping things natural. She has been challenged by a swampy area behind the house that now has a gazebo surrounded by a profusion of perennials.

• Paul and Jackie Lazenby, 22725 Pelomar Lane: created a colonial period garden using a lot of broadleaf evergreens and perennials. Their garden and a five-acre stocked lake accent a colonial period home that Paul Lazenby constructed in a new gated community named Reflections.

• Dover Farms, 13302 U.S. Rt. 36: is a small nursery managed by Lynn Emler and Lynn Murphy, who will share a wealth of knowledge about prairie and woodland plants that are native to Ohio.

• Marysville's McCloud Park: located at the corner of West 5th and West 4th Streets, which is now in phase two of the renovation of its perennial and shrub beds, is the showcase garden for the Master Gardeners of Union County, who have provided landscape design, construction and maintenance. WOSU radio host Tom Wiebell and GreenScene members will be at McCloud to answer horticulture questions and offer games and prizes.

Tickets are $5 each and may be purchased in advance at the Union County Extension Office, 246 West 5th Street, Marysville, or from any Union County master gardener. On the day of the tour, tickets may be purchased at the Union County Extension office or at any other featured garden on the tour. Ice Cream Highlights Oregon Dairy's Family Farm Days

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Guests at this week's event at Oregon Dairy should have a clearer picture of the farm-to-table process after touring the dairy barns and tasting the free milk and ice cream samples.

The three-day event included dairy and agriculture-related activities such as a wagon ride tour of the farm, live chick hatching, and straw tunnel.

Last year the event drew 8,000 visitors. This year approximately 9,000 will attend, predicts Brent Landis of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

Brent Hurst, 11, Manheim Township, and Jonathon Hurst, 12, Brownstown, spent the early days of their summer vacation dipping ice cream samples for visitors. Although vanilla was in demand on Tuesday, chocolate was the flavor of choice on Wednesday, they said.

Lancaster's 4-H organized pony rides, sheep shearing demonstrations, and a scavenger hunt.

The dairy hosts 350 cows which are milked three times a day to supply the grocery store on the premises.

Lancaster Farming sponsored a booth in the exhibitor area. Newspaper representatives handed out free plastic bags and several hundred copies of the paper to the crowd. In addition many visitors took the opportunity to register for the three drawings for a free one-year subscription.

N.Y. Bill Passed To Aid Milk Vending Machines

ALBANY, N.Y. — The Assembly has passed legislation sponsored by Assembly Agriculture Committee Chair Bill Magee (D-Nelson) that would assist companies with selling milk through vending machines.

"I think it would be great to see a milk vending machine next to every soda machine in our schools," Magee said. "The passage of this bill is a step in that direction as it represents one of the greatest ways that this state can benefit agriculture — helping our farmers sell more of their product."

This bill would exempt those who vend food, beverages and milk through vending machines from having to become a licensed milk dealer as long as they purchase their milk from licensed dealers, are subject to the state sanitary code and do not operate a pasteurizing plant.

"This bill can have nothing but a positive effect on our consumers and our dairy farmers as vending companies that deal in milk are well regulated in terms of the quality of their product by the state sanitary code and obviously they want to do everything they can to increase the sales of the products in their machines — including milk," Magee said.

This bill falls in line with the Assembly Agriculture Committee's philosophy and agenda that in addition to tax breaks and other business incentives the state also needs to provide farmers with the tools to better market their products and diversify their farming operations as well as providing consumers with information needed to buy "locally grown, locally known" products. Other bills that the Assembly has considered include a bill requiring the placement of the municipality and zip code on a milk carton that shows where it was processed; a bill expanding the definition of farm operation under the agricultural districts law to include horse boarding and manure processing; as well as a bill that would create New York State's first AgriDevelopment Zones.

"I have said it over and over again that farming and agriculture is more than just milking a cow and throwing seeds in the ground — it is an international business which forces you to compete with Canadian and European farmers, so the state should be do everything they can to lower a farmers cost of production while assisting them with increasing their marketing opportunities and revenue," Magee concluded.

The bill has passed both Assembly and Senate and now goes to the Governor.

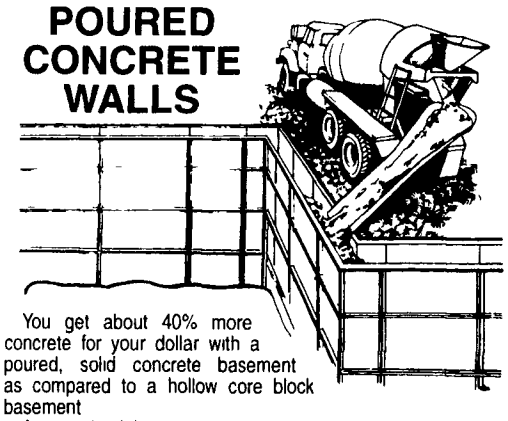
START WITH THE BEST! POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Alfalfa Pest Update

Paul H. Craig
Penn State Extension
Dauphin County

The 2001 alfalfa weevil infestations have proven to be as bad as or worse than in 2000. Unlike last season most producers anticipated the need for control measures, thus overall economic loss to alfalfa stands was not as great as last season.

Researchers note that alfalfa weevils have a long egg laying and hatching period. This spring was an excellent example of that characteristic. First hatchings were noted in southern Dauphin County on April 18. Two weeks later, on May 3, newly hatched instars were found in the same vicinity. This delayed hatching resulted in a few producers applying materials too soon and then being forced to treat a second time.

A second cause of control failure is related to the amount of carrier used with the insecticide and placement of the materials. From observations this spring and last year, 15 gallons of carrier per acre is not enough to provide adequate coverage of the foliage, 20 gallons/acre should be the minimum. In addition, higher pump pressures and flat fan tips are needed for best controls.

A few producers "short cut" their first cutting to avoid additional weevil damage. Unfortunately, the weevils were still in the development stage and stubble treatment was required.

The question asked frequently this season was why are the weevils again a pest to alfalfa after nearly 20 years and will they continue to be a problem in south central Pennsylvania. The answer to both questions is uncertain at this time. Entomologists attribute the large populations to build ups in local areas that were not treated and ideal weather to ensure high winter survival of adults and the developing larva in late April and early May. No one will make any guess for 2002, but most alfalfa producers will certainly be looking at their stands in early May next year for weevil.

Weather patterns to date have not been favorable for the annual migration of potato leafhoppers (PLH) into our area. Each season PLH are brought to our area by spring and summer storms that originate in the south. To date, we are not getting the weather from our south, rather the jet stream is flowing directly west to east across Pennsylvania. This pattern has placed most of the east in a droughty situation.

Once the leafhoppers arrive, their populations rapidly increase in a short time. Growers are advised to monitor alfalfa stands during June and July for the presence of this insect. Study after study has shown that PLH can impact both plant growth and persistence. New work in Wisconsin has revealed that in addition to top growth injury, the PLH has significant negative affect on root development.

Growers should pay close attention to new seedings. Timeliness of harvest established stands often drives adult PLH into later maturing new seedings. Threshold levels for new seedings are typically reduced to provide optimum protection for this young crop. For additional information refer to The Agronomy Guide or contact your Penn State Cooperative Extension office for a publication on alfalfa insect control.

Ethanol Growth Assured In New Senate Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) pledged its support of "The Renewable Fuels For Energy Security Act," introduced last week by Sens. Chuck Hagel (R-NE) and Tim Johnson (D-SD). Their bill would establish a national renewable fuel standard for gasoline and diesel production.

This bill creates a primary role for ethanol in the emerging national energy policy by promoting the growth and use of a domestically produced, renewable fuel. The Renewable Fuels for Energy Security Act sets a goal where ethanol replaced three percent of the energy used in highway transportation by 2011; by 2016, that figure will rise to five percent.

For ethanol producers, the practical impact of this bill has tremendous potential. By meeting the goals set by Sens. Hagel and Johnson, industry capacity would jump to nine billion gallons by 2011 and 16 billion gallons by 2016. That level of production would displace oil imports by 300,000 barrels daily by 2011 and 610,000 barrels a day five years later. The bill is visionary in that it sets production goals that will advance the goal of energy security and self-sufficiency that President Bush cited when he introduced his energy plan last month.

Lee Klein, NCGA president and a Battle Creek, Neb. farmer said, "The Renewable Fuels for Energy Security Act translates the hopes and aspirations of NCGA's Ethanol Task Force into a vehicle that can make our dream become reality by: Growing the ethanol industry so that corn producers can help the nation meet its energy needs, raising the price of corn so that farmers can help themselves and their families, and building more ethanol plants so that we can develop employment and economic opportunities in rural communities. We look forward to working with Senators Hagel and Johnson to place a renewable fuels provision into the energy bill during the 107th Congress."

SUN Prepares For Dairy Extravaganza

SELINSGROVE (Snyder Co.) — The crowning of the SUN Area dairy princess and the construction of a 7-foot-high ice cream sundae will highlight the SUN Area Dairy Princess Committee's annual dairy festivities, to be held in conjunction with Ag/Dairy Days at the Susquehanna Valley Mall in Selinsgrove, Thursday through Saturday, June 21-23.

Selena Hollenbach of Snyder County and Alicia Wolfe of Montour County are vying for the title of SUN Area (Snyder, Union, Northumberland, and Montour Counties) Dairy Princess. The winner will be announced Saturday, June 23.

In addition to the crowning of a new dairy princess, a variety of other family events are planned in connection with Ag/Dairy Days.

On Thursday, June 21, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., the public will be able to purchase milkshakes prepared by the Eager Beaver 4-H Dairy Club.

Recognition of area 4-H Leaders, musical entertainment by KJ Reimensnyder, and the judging of milk carton sculptures also will take place at the mall on Thursday evening. Samples of a variety of cheeses, courtesy of local banking institutions, will be available all three days.

Beginning at 6 p.m. on Friday, June 22, Turkey Hill Dairies will provide the ice cream and toppings to construct a 7-foot tall sundae. The sundae will be made with 135 gallons of ice cream, 10 gallons of chocolate fudge, 25 pounds of pecans, and 5 gallons of cherries.

Dairy princess royalty, which includes the reigning dairy princess, alternates, contestants for the 2001-2002 title and dairy maids and dairy misses will serve samples of the sundae to the public. Assisting them will be members from the local Future Farmers of America (FFA) Chapters.

Saturday, June 23, will feature a pedal tractor pull for children beginning at 11 a.m. Also, Swineford National Bank with hold its annual Scooper Bowl, with proceeds to be donated to the local 4-H Foundation. There also will be samples of milk punch, along with a variety of dairy and agriculture related displays.

Beginning at 7 p.m, in Boscov's North Court, Dawn Marie, of Big Country Radio, and Jane Hawn, of Boscov's public relations department, will kick off the 28th annual SUN Area Dairy Princess Pageant. During the pageant a fashion show will be held, with dairy princess royalty modeling fashions from Boscov's.

Selena Hollenbach, the dairy princess contestant representing Snyder County, is currently a SUN Area alternate dairy princess. She is the daughter of Scott and Sandy Hollenbach and works on the family farm, Lochiel Dairy. The Hollenbachs own 110 dairy animals and raise alfalfa, corn and soybeans.

Alicia Wolfe, who is representing Montour County in the dairy princess pageant, is the daughter of Arthur Wolfe and Tammy Stine and will be a senior at Danville High School this fall. She is actively involved in FFA and 4-H. Her interests include showing dairy cattle and playing softball and soccer. Alicia's family farm, Plumside Dairy, is home to 250 dairy animals, of which 200 are milked. She is employed part-time at Dunkin Donuts.

Pasture Watering Systems Tour Announced

JACOBUS (York Co.) — On Monday, July 30, at 6:30 p.m., South Branch Farms will be hosting a pasture watering systems tour at their operation along Reynolds Mill Road in the Jacobus area.

South Branch Farms recently installed a solar pump watering system and a series of spring developments. An informal tour will be conducted to look at and discuss different options for watering systems. There will not be formal presentations, but the farm manager and technical resource people from various agencies or businesses will be available to answer your questions on solar pumps, spring developments, pasture management, stream fencing, and any other topics that are raised.

The tour will be held rain or shine. Refreshments will be provided. The tour is free, but please RSVP to the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) office at (717) 755-2966, ext. 191 by July 27. If you have special needs, please contact the South Branch Farms office at (717) 741-8395 so arrangements can be made.

The tour is co-sponsored by South Branch Farms, the NRCS, York County Conservation District, and Vertis Bream, solar and water pumps dealer.

Direction to South Branch Farms: Take Route 83 to Exit 4 (Leaders' Heights exit). At end of ramp, turn right (if heading south on 83) or left (if heading north) onto Leaders Heights Road. Follow to second traffic light. Turn left onto South George Street. Make an immediate right onto Reynolds Mill Road. Travel 1.7 miles and you will see the first South Branch Farms sign on the left with split rail fencing. At the fifth South Branch Farms sign, turn right onto Kinsley Lane, and follow the road to the end.

Milk Marketing Board Announces May Class I Price

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) announced the prices to be paid for Pennsylvania Class I milk (beverage) for May as an average of $18.26 in the western areas of the commonwealth, and an average of $18.75 in the central and eastern areas of the commonwealth. However, the price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

Southeastern Ohio Hay Day Set For June 16

CALDWELL, Ohio — Producers will have the opportunity to improve their forage production and get a glimpse at this year's latest farming equipment by heading to the fourth annual Southeastern Ohio Hay Day at the Eastern Ohio Resource Development Center in Caldwell, Ohio on June 16.

The event has always produced a good turnout in the past, and should this year as well, according to Cliff Little, an agricultural/natural resources agent with Ohio State University Extension. The field day is free and open to the public, and refreshments will be available throughout the day.

Due to the widespread outbreak of foot and mouth disease in other parts of the world, visitors who have been traveling outside of the continental U.S. within 10 days of June 16 are advised not to attend the event, as a precautionary measure. The disease has not yet been introduced to the U.S., but these measures are being taken to help ensure that Ohio State's livestock herds and flocks remain free of this disease given the level of visitor traffic the facilities experience.

"This year's program will be a little different in the beginning, as we will have a presentation about foot and mouth disease," Little said. "We will also be demonstrating our new equipment along with a new field demonstration on managing fescue."

The program will have seven field demonstrations in all, along with an educational session on managing forages. In addition to the education sessions and field demonstrations, there will also be some exhibitors on hand. Participants can ask questions and get information from the businesses. The exhibitors that will be at the event are hay equipment manufacturers, local equipment dealers, local soil and water conservation district offices, and Ohio State Extension.

"We encourage everyone to attend, but we are particularly interested in producers who care for livestock and are concerned with forage production," Little said.

For more information or directions to the event, call the EORDC at (740) 432-9300 or (740) 732-2682. The event is sponsored by the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center and Ohio State University Extension. Both are part of the Ohio State University's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences.

Bill To Extend Subsidies

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A state program that subsidizes farmers' crop insurance premiums won' t expire as scheduled this June if House Agriculture Committee Chairman Ray Bunt Jr. (R-147) has anything to say about it.

The House recently passed legislation authored by the Montgomery County lawmaker that extends the life of the program by one year.

House Bill 1454 amends Act 57 of 1999, the Drought, Orchard and Nursery Indemnity and Flood Relief Act, to consolidate all money appropriated under the act into one account to be used for extension of the crop insurance subsidy program until June 30, 2002.

The sum of $60 million was appropriated for crop loss payments and another $5.6 million to subsidize federal crop insurance premiums and fees for the 2000 and 2001 crop years.

Another component of the act appropriates $2,000,000 to the plum pox indemnity program.

Through Good Times And Bad – He's Still My Dad

Wives, Children Pay Tribute To Husbands, Fathers

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Dad — the most important man in a child's life.

Without him, mothers often falter.

Dad's affirmations, diligence in work, and dependability in fathering have long lasting impact upon all family members.

Readers in this week's issue share several different viewpoints of life with father, from happy times to unexpected hardships.

Appreciation for all the little things dads do is often left unsaid, but Susan Hess, Mount Joy, and her daughter Aubrey want to take this Father's Day to express their love and gratitude to husband, farmer, and dad — Gene.

Susan writes, in the entry submitted for Lancaster Farming's Dairy Month Drawing, "We want to say thanks to Gene for the wonderful job he does as a husband, farmer, and dad. We count it a privilege to farm in Lancaster County. We milk a herd of 70 plus Holsteins three times a day. We enjoy what we do and make family memories a big part of our lives."

Daniel and Julianne Young started their life together in a farming venture with great optimism. But life threw some unplanned obstacles. Two years after beginning farming, Dan was hospitalized for seizures. He was diagnosed with epilepsy. Medication helps to control it, but slows him down.

Unfortunately, his wife is limited in the help she is able to offer on the farm. She has multiple sclerosis.

Despite health problems and low corn prices, the Youngs are continuing to milk 40 cows, raise 40 heifers, and farm 75 acres in Mohnton. Julianne credits prayer and the help of church friends and neighbors for enabling them to persevere. Julianne writes, "It would have been easier to give up, but our dream would never have become a reality."

Their story is a reminder to us all not to take health and each other for granted.

Less than one year ago, Sue Bowman's dad's life ended on her 50th birthday. Now this Lebanon County reader is left with only memories — happy memories that sustain her. Before her dad passed away, his illness required him to be placed in a nursing home. This decision was extremely painful for his wife, Sue, and her brother.

To help others who face similar situations, Sue shares her family's experiences (see story on "Happy Memories Remain After Dad Is Gone").

Father's Day will no doubt be a bittersweet time for Sue's family. She writes, "Dad's pleasant personality and fun sense of humor were taken from us long before his body, but we have a host of happy memories to sustain us."

Her story is a reminder to all of us to never take our dads or husbands for granted. Although many fathers will receive gifts in honor of this day set aside for the third Sunday of every June, most men will agree that the greatest gift they could receive is one of appreciation from their children and wives.

There is no reason to limit appreciation to one day. Celebrate Father's Day every day by expressing your love to that special man in your life.

Before his death, J. Alfred Bowman is surrounded by those who loved him. From left, granddaughter Melissa Bowman VanLeeuwen, E. Fay Bowman, wife of 60 years, and daughter Sue Bowman.

"Gene does a wonderful job as husband, farmer, and dad," wife Susan said. The Hesses are shown with daughter Aubrey.

Life hasn't been easy for the Young family. Parents Daniel and Julianne struggle with debilitating illnesses, but are thankful they can continue farming with children Sarah, 12; Hannah, 10; and Moriah, 8.

Dad Is Gone

But Happy Memories Remain

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Like a good many older persons, my father found himself in need of skilled nursing care with little warning. A bout of shingles followed by a diagnosis of normal pressure hydrocephalus spelled the end of his being able to live independently in less than six weeks' time. After a period of hospitalization, he was sent to a nearby rehabilitation unit for physical therapy.

Unfortunately, his condition didn't improve as he neared the 20-day Medicare limit for fully paid skilled care following a hospitalization. We were given a few short days to relocate him elsewhere.

We had hoped for Dad to be able to return home, but his level of functioning dictated that he needed round the clock care. Statistics show that, with increasing life spans has come the greater likelihood of spending some time in an extended care facility of some sort. I had always assumed that the hospital's social workers would provide ample guidance and support in finding a nursing home placement. Instead, we were given a printed listing of area facilities and a rapidly approaching deadline by which to vacate the rehab unit. The local area agency on aging was more helpful. However, as a result of the short time frame, we were forced to place him in the only local nursing home that had an immediate opening. This was to be a temporary placement while my father awaited brain surgery that might restore his abilities. Nevertheless, I set about making arrangements for him to spend his surgical recovery period elsewhere.

My father was not capable of making decisions for himself at this juncture, but we had the advantage of already knowing where he would prefer to be placed. This subject had been the topic of some rather oblique discussions, most of which centered on the fact that there was a small church-related nursing home within two miles of our home. It was not a fancy place, but it was clean and the staff was caring — and it was where his mother, my grandmother, had spent her latter days almost 20 years before. Perhaps more importantly, it was the facility at which his younger brother had already been a patient for almost a year.

The nursing home catered mainly to farm folks, such as my Dad. The added advantage of this was that many of the patients and their families already knew each other, which meant there was a steady stream of visitors who regularly made their rounds of old friends and acquaintances. We were relieved when this nursing facility was able to offer my father a room several weeks after he applied.

My father's brain surgery was, unfortunately, not successful in returning him to a level of functioning which required less than constant care. What follows is a compilation of practical tips and pointers gleaned from daily visits to my father's nursing home by my mother and/or myself, some of these suggestions offered by my cousin, Carol Jackson, who had been visiting her father daily as well. Ironically, my father and his brother were in adjacent rooms, and were often seated next to each other in the dining hall even though they no longer fully recognized each other.

• Talk about nursing home selection before the need arises. Just like preplanning a funeral, discussing extended care facility preferences is not a particularly pleasant topic; however, it's better for everyone's peace of mind if the affected individual has had some input into this decision-making process.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

Every slow moving piece of farm equipment is, by law, required to display one.

You've all seen them, those triangular-shaped, reflective orange signs which visibly shout from slow moving farm equipment: "Hey, you, this thing is probably not traveling as fast as you are, so pay attention and slow down." Please.

SMV (slow moving vehicle) signs are as recognizable as "stop" signs, "no parking" signs and "yield" signs. But, year after year, folks don't...stop, avoid parking, or yield.

Nor do some slow down for those reflective triangular signs, instead somehow interpreting them to mean "get irritated and do something careless (or illegal) to get around" the SMV-displaying vehicle in question, putting both operators at risk. Resulting in farmers and roadside mowing crews getting "mowed" down. Sometimes fatally.

It would be nice if folks would view those reflective triangular signs as symbolic of how well-fed this nation is, thanks in part to the efforts of that slow-moving equipment they impatiently want to zip around.

Had I had been operating a slow-moving-vehicle and displaying the reflective triangular warning sign on a recent evening, I might better understand the impatience directed at me last week by a fellow user of the highway. Dangerous, idiotic impatience.

Headed south on the Harrisburg "beltway" about dusk, I was traveling the speed limit, 55 to 60 miles per hour, keeping up with the flow of traffic. A short distance ahead, my lane sharply curved to the right, so I kept a couple of carlengths between my car and the one ahead. Suddenly, just a few hundred yards before the curve, a loud horn blasted behind me. I glanced in my rear-view mirror to find two huge, high lights glaring at me from the mirror. Truck. Big truck. Obviously impatient truck driver, literally riding "right on my tail."

My first inclination was to tap the brakes, my usual "back-off" reaction to drivers who are recklessly trying to inspect my car's rear bumper. Mind you, I drive a little compact-type car, and this impatient truck was within inches of it, rolling at high speed. I tossed that idea and went to Plan B: keep driving.

A flicker of intimidation zipped through my brain, recalling a trucker who repeatedly bumped and pushed a car for 12 miles — yep, you read that right — not far away on this same interstate about a year ago. With the known impending curve, I simply held my speed as the turn appeared ahead. The trucker backed off a bit, as we rounded the tight curve.

Then, with a merging lane of traffic on each side, it pulled back within inches of my truck — and blasted the horn again. Once more, I held my pace steady, until traffic cleared the right lane, and then swung over, to allow this jerk to get by. The left lane was already lined with traffic moving no faster. Go figure.

As the big, white, 18-wheeler eventually rolled by, I registered some nasty thoughts, then decided just because its driver was being stupid, didn't mean I had to act in kind. However, with no traffic close behind in either lane, I swung back into the left lane and kept pace with the truck, trying to get the number on its license plate.

The big, white rig bore the name "Springfield" (which could be from anywhere) and displayed a bright yellow license plate. Because of the bumpy highway and the poor light, I never did get a good "read" on the license number or the state of registry. Eager to have some distance between me and rolling trouble, I dropped back into the traveling lane, relieved when the truck moved on.

Just the day before, a friend had related a similar story of trucker aggressiveness, in a rig bearing one of those "How's my driving?" toll-free phone numbers to call. The folks traveling in the car checked the license plate, picked up their cell phone, dialed the reporting number — and answered that question.

I've always felt great respect and admiration for truckers who endanger their lives on the highway just trying to do their jobs. How sad that a few knuckleheads — like one driving a white, "Springfield" tractor-trailer rig with a bright yellow license plate — destroy that image.

I pray that particular impatient, lamebrained trucker never comes up behind a farmer on a SMV.

Donate Unwanted Fabric

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — One person's discards are another person's treasures!

Have you extra fabric that's been taking up space in your sewing room or basement? Can't even find the most recent fabric you purchased? Maybe it's hidden under that pile that you don't really need.

By donating your unwanted fabric to the Montgomery County 4-H Program, you'll begin to straighten up your sewing room and benefit a good cause as well.

4-H volunteers are eager to take clean fabric in decent shape off your hands for the upcoming Giant Fabric Sale. Donations will be accepted from now through July 13 at the 4-H Center, located on Route 113, one mile south of Route 73, near Skippack. Call Helaine Brown, 4-H agent, at (610) 489-4315, before coming, to make sure that someone will be available to receive your bounty.

The 4-H Giant Fabric Sale will take place during the Montgomery County 4-H Fair, Thursday, Aug. 9 through Saturday, Aug. 11. Sale hours are Thursday, 6-8 p.m., Friday 12-8 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. All proceeds will directly benefit the Montgomery County 4-H Center, which provides youth and adult educational programs for county residents.

If you're a fabric collector, then, you probably enjoy sewing, too. Don't forget to come and see the 4-H Fashion Show presented by youth sewers at 3 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 11, during the fair. Admission is free for the 4-H Fair, but a $3 parking donation is requested to benefit the Montgomery County 4-H Program. In return, you receive a 4-H yearbook which tells you all about 4-H and what's going on at the 4-H Fair.

West Virginia Dairy Princess Writes Poem To Honor Her Favorite Farmer

MARTINSBURG, W.V. — West Virginia Dairy Princess Julie Linton uniquely promotes the dairy industry and offers the non-farming community a glimpse of farming by reciting a poem she wrote.

The poem tells of a farmer's toil to provide food for the world.

Julie wrote the poem for her advanced placement English class. She plans to study agricultural communications at West Virginia University in the fall.

"I want to promote the products my family works so hard to produce," Julie said.

She is proud to be the fifth generation on the family farm, where her parents (Jim and Robin Linton) farm with her dad's brothers and nephews.

In time for Father's Day, here is Julie's poem to honor her dad and farmers everywhere.

The Farmer
Julie Linton

He works all day in the earth's fertile soil.
It's the family farmer, this is his line of toil,
His time-worn hands have worked 'til they've bled,
From sun up to sun down, so his family is fed.
And the diggin', draggin' Deere is his most cherished toy.
Sometimes he acts just like a full-grown boy.
Plowin' up dirt and messin' around,
But when there's work to be done, it all settles down.
He gets up at four to care for the cows,
Fix tractors, and silos, to plant, and to plow.
So that's the farmer's job, true and clear.
He farms week after week and year after year.
And the American farmer feeds the world cow by cow, day by day,
With every seed that is planted, and every stacked bale of hay.
So the next time you sit down for milk, cheese, or bread,
It's because of my daddy that you will be fed.

West Virginia Dairy Princess Julie Linton is proud to be the fifth generation on the family's Martinsburg farm and the daughter of dairy farmer Jim Linton.

Kids Take The Lead At The Museum

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Parents are always interested in visiting museums to teach their children history. The summer, teens take the lead as the Hershey Museum's volunteer past masters, ages 12-14, present a uniquely variety of family activities that incorporate pieces of history from the museum's collections.

Starting June 25 and running through Aug. 17, visit the museum weekday afternoons between 1 p.m.-4:30 p.m. and the past masters will offer adults and kids alike some fun activities. Although they change every day, sometimes projects include rope-making, weaving, candlemaking, or chocolate sorting.

Hershey Museum is open daily 10 a.m.-6 p.m. through Labor Day, and is located adjacent to Hersheypark Arena. Admission is $6 adults, $5.50 seniors 62 and up, $3 youths 3-15, and children under 3 are free. For more information, call (717) 534-3439, or visit the Website www.hersheymuseum.org.

Wanted: A Size Friendly Environment

Though we may be taught not to judge a book by its cover, in this culture, many of us do. It is estimated that 30 percent of Americans are 20 percent more than their "ideal weight," or overweight. The percentage is increasing.

Between one and two million people are at least 100 pounds above the normal weight range and are considered "morbidly obese."

It would seem that weight is one of the last bastions of acceptable discrimination. Obese people face daily discrimination in the areas of employment, insurance, medical treatment, education, adoption, access, and social interaction. In addition, obese persons make less money on average, and are more likely to be poor than those considered attractive by cultural standards.

The $40 million dollar diet industry and the media continue to assume there is only one acceptable body size. Although an increasing number of men are becoming concerned about their weight, women tend to be held to more stringent expectations in this area. The pressure to be slim begins early for little girls; dieting may begin at the age of 10.

Although unrealistic, Barbie has been girls' role model for many years. It is estimated that only one in a million females would naturally have Barbie's figure. Both girls and women are confronted with "fashion model" looking characters on favorite television shows. These are difficult standards to meet, especially since the overwhelming majority of women weigh more than the average fashion model and fashion models weigh 20 percent less than the average women.

Unfortunately, there are many myths about size and weight. Let's examine some of them.

Myth: Obese people are overweight because they eat too much and lack willpower.

Fact: Most studies have shown that, on the average, obese people eat no more calories per day than other people. Some fat people eat a lot, even too much; others eat lightly.

There is considerable evidence that some people have a genetic predisposition to be fat. Scientists have isolated an "obesity gene" believed to have mutated in obese people, causing a disorder in energy metabolism.

Dieting does not always have the desired results. In fact, most diets are only temporary, working for a short time. Most people gain most or all of their weight back within a few months or a few years. What may be even more hazardous to health than being overweight, is continuously dieting, losing and regaining — the "yo-yo" effect.

Myth: Obese people are less productive workers.

Fact: Obese people, on the average, are just as productive as other workers. Some jobs, such as those performed in tight quarters (example airline attendant) may be inappropriate for obese people. And some accommodations may be needed to accommodate size.

Myth: Size discrimination is not a real problem like sexism, racism, or class bias.

Fact: Discrimination based on size is wrong. Obese people are denied jobs and promotions because of internalized belief that fat is unattractive, that fat people are to blame for their size, and that fat people are morally lacking in character.

Fat people are often denied access to quality of life. Inadequate seating denies them access to airplane seats, theaters, films, restaurants, and some classrooms.

Obsession with diets has caused many people to die of side effects of eating disorders, weight loss surgeries, and uneven medical care. And negative glances and comments wear away at self-esteem and confidence.

The multi-billion dollar diet industry encourages hope and false myths that only two to five percent of all overweight people can attain. It is time we move beyond the beauty myth to an appreciation of diverse forms of beauty and to valuing people for their inner qualities and contributions. The following are a few suggestions to help create a size friendly environment:

1. Examine your own attitudes and biases towards obese people.
2. Don't assume that fat people are dieting all the time. Don't assume they are eating all the time either.
3. Remember that many overweight people eat healthy foods, are active, and lead normal lives. Do not assume their major problem is their weight.
4. Overweight people may receive less positive feedback on their appearance than thin people, even during childhood, which can make a difference in their self-esteem and self-image. When complimenting a person, say "That dress looks great on you," rather than, "That dress makes you look much slimmer."
5. Consider the appropriateness of talking about your diet or weight issues to colleagues. Consider how the colleague may feel if you negatively comment about your weight to a colleague who is larger than you.
6. Treat everyone fairly and with respect, regardless as to their size or body shape.
7. Start noticing the beauty and positive aspects of overweight people.

Honey Producers To Meet

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Honey Producers will have a picnic meeting at the Lancaster County Park on June 19 beginning at 6 p.m. Those attending should take a covered dish and a dessert — honey sweetened is best.

Celebrate June Dairy Month With Good Tastes

This is the third week we are celebrating June Dairy Month by printing the contest entries submitted for Lancaster Farming's annual dairy drawing.

Not only do these recipes show the versatility and goodness of milk, the additional information about the entry and the person who submits the recipe enhances the reading.

More recipe entries will be printed in the next two issues. A list of the winners will be printed in the June 30th edition. Until then, enjoy these recipes. You'll never run out of ideas.

VANILLA CHIP FRUIT TART

¼ cup butter, softened
½ cup powdered sugar
1½ cups all-purpose flour

Heat oven to 300 degrees. In small mixing bowl, beat butter and powdered sugar until smooth; blend in flour. Press mixture onto bottom and up sides of 12-inch round pizza pan. Flute edge, if desired. Bake 20-25 minutes or until lightly browned, cool completely.

Prepare vanilla filling: In microwave-safe bowl, place:

1⅓ cups vanilla milk chips
¼ cup whipping cream

Microwave on high 1 to 1½ minutes or until chips are melted and mixture is smooth. Beat in:

8-ounces softened cream cheese

Spread vanilla filling on crust. Cover; refrigerate.

Prepare fruit topping:

¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup pineapple juice
½ teaspoon lemon juice
Assorted fresh fruit, sliced (fresh peaches, strawberries, blueberries, kiwi, or raspberries

In small saucepan, stir together sugar and cornstarch; stir in juices. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Cool. Meanwhile arrange fruit on top of filling; carefully pour or brush juice mixture over fruit.

Cover; refrigerate assembled tart until just before serving. 10-12 servings.

As we celebrate June Dairy Month, we count it a privilege to farm in Lancaster County. We milk a 70-plus herd of Hosteins three times a day.

We enjoy what we do and make family memories a big part of our lives. We are thankful to be part of the dairy industry.

Aubrey and I want to say thanks to Gene for the wonderful job he does as a husband, farmer, and dad.

Happy Father's Day!

MAGNIFICENT MASHED POTATOES

5 pounds potatoes, peeled
6-ounces cream cheese
1 cup sour cream
2 teaspoons onion salt
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter, to dot before heating

Cook potatoes in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain. Mash until smooth. Add remaining ingredients and beat until light and fluffy. Cool. Cover and refrigerate. May be used anytime within two weeks. To use, place in greased 2-quart casserole. Dot with butter and bake at 350 degrees about 30 minutes or until heated through. Makes 12 servings (8 cups).

We milk 40 cows, raise 30 heifers, and farm about 75 acres on Wits' End Farm near Mohnton. We have been renting our farm for seven years. Without the help of our landlord, neighbors, and the blessing of the Lord, we never would have made it.

Two years into the business, Dan developed epilepsy. Several seizures put him into the hospital. He is still on medication, which slows him down somewhat, but he tries not to think about it.

Julie has multiple sclerosis, which also limits her helping.

After much prayer and council from some of our church friends, we decided to continue farming. With Dan's health, corn at $5.50 a bushel, and the many problems coming with starting out, we had much to worry about. Thankfully, those are only memories and today things seem to be much better. It would have been easier to give up, but our dream would never have become a reality.

STRAWBERRY TORTE

Crust:
2 cups flour
½ cup brown sugar
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup melted butter
Filling:
8-ounces cream cheese
1 cup powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups whipped cream (less if desired)
Topping:
1 box strawberry-flavored Danish dessert

Make Danish dessert as instructed on package.

Mix crust ingredients and press into 9x13-inch pan. Bake 15 minutes at 400 degrees. Cool slightly. Crumble crust and repress lightly into pan. Mix together filling and pour over cooled crust. Top with Danish dessert. Chill 12 hours and serve.

This is a quick and easy recipe for fruit lovers. Strawberries are one of our favorites and this we like better than pie. With strawberries beginning to ripen, I look forward to using fresh ones. I have a patch of my own with other vegetables in my garden.

My husband, James, is a dairy farmer, so with milking cows and gardening, and health, my summer days zoom by.

PARMESAN CHICKEN

½ cup saltine crackers, crumbled
½ cup Ritz crackers, crumbled
⅓ cup grated parmesan cheese
½ cup butter, melted
4 skinless, boneless chicken breasts
10¼-ounce can cream of chicken soup
1 cup milk
8-ounces sour cream

Combine cracker crumbs and parmesan cheese in medium bowl, mix well. Place melted butter in a small bowl. Dip chicken pieces in melted butter, roll in cracker mixture.

Place chicken pieces in greased 9x13-inch baking dish. After you have finished, sprinkle leftover crumb mixture on top of chicken.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until golden brown.

Mix soup, milk, and sour cream into a large bowl and pour over browned chicken. Bake 15 minutes longer or until bubbly. Stir before serving.

This mixture makes an excellent gravy for noodles or rice.

This is a favorite recipe of our family. As an active part of the farming operation, I need quick and easy meals. This sure qualifies, and taste appeal is great.

My husband and I own and operate a 12-acre dairy farm in Snyder County near Middleburg. We milk approximately 50 Holsteins in a new tie stall barn that was built after a fire in 1998. Our son, Scott works at a nearby feedmill. He and his fiancee, Becky, help out whenever they can. We just built a new heifer barn, so along with our own animals, we are now custom raising some heifers.

We have a large collection of dairy and veterinary antiques. We still enjoy collecting by going to flea markets, tractor shows, and on the internet.

Gardening is my passion, while Terry enjoys Nascar races Sunday afternoons.

Have a great June Dairy Month!

I have been married to a wonderful man for 13 years and we have three beautiful daughters, ages 2½, 5, and 7.

We live on a small farm in Perry County. We raise a very large garden as well as dairy beef, sheep, pigs, and a horse.

There's a cake recipe that is bound to be an "instant hit" in any family — especially for those with a "sweet tooth."

My husband Nelson and I live on a dairy farm that consists of 140 acres and approximately 45 milking cows, besides a few dry cows, heifer, calves...and a dog, an overabundance of cats, and 21 chicks.

We have three sons. Our twins Jerry and Jordan are 2½-years-old. Davin will 1-year-old on June 19.

Being boys, all three seem to revel in farm life, especially water, dirt, and any combination of those two ingredients (which equals mud)!

They do enjoy "helping" with chores too, when they can. Feeding calves and chickens seems to be a highlight. How blessed we are to be able to watch our little ones grow up on an exciting (?) place like a farm!

ANSWER — Stella Hager, Kintnersville, had the misfortune of losing the recipe for peanut butter pie, which she had clipped from this column. Thanks to Carol Alleman, Hummelstown, for sending a recipe.

Peanut Butter Pie

9-inch graham cracker crust, or Oreo chocolate crust
8-ounces cream cheese, room temperature
½ cup milk
½ cup peanut butter (more if needed)
1 cup powdered sugar
9-ounce container whipped topping

Beat together cream cheese and sugar. Add peanut butter and milk. Mix well. Fold in whipped topping. Pour into pie shell. Sprinkle with peanuts or mini chocolate chips. Drizzle with fudge or serve plain. Place in freezer. Remove 30 minutes before serving. Pie can be refrigerated instead of frozen, but, Carol writes, she thinks it tastes better frozen. She writes that this is a good recipe to make ahead and keep frozen for emergency desserts when needed.

ANSWER — Luci Essig requested a recipe for an ice cream cake. Thanks to Pat Elligson, Millers, Md., for sending two of her recipes.

Ice Cream Cake Loaf

1 pound cake mix or 1 pound cake loaf
1 pint ice cream
8-ounces whipped topping

Prepare and bake cake as directed in a loaf pan. Remove from pan and cool completely. Slice cake horizontally into three layers. Place bottom layer on plate, spread with half the ice cream, top with middle layer of cake. Spread with remaining ice cream and place on top layer. Frost top and sides of cake generously with whipped topping and place in freezer. When firm, wrap loosely in foil. Freeze at least six hours or overnight.

Note: sherbet may be substituted for ice cream. Bamboo skewers pushed down through the cake will help steady the layers to keep them from sliding while frosting it.

To serve, remove foil, let stand 5 minutes, slice.

Chocolate Cherry Ice Cream Cake

1 Devil's Food cake mix
1 quart cherry or cherry vanilla ice cream
1 large container whipped topping

Bake cake as directed in two 8-inch layer pans. Slice cooled layers in half horizontally into four layers. Place bottom layer on plate and spread with ice cream. Top with second layer and spread with ice cream. Continue as before. Place top layer on the cake. Push four bamboo skewers through all layers to prevent cake from sliding.

Frost top and sides with whipped topping. Place in freezer. When firm, wrap loosely in foil, remove skewers. Freeze eight hours or overnight. To serve, remove foil, let stand 8-10 minutes before slicing.

Note: a yellow cake mix works well also, as does cherry, strawberry, or raspberry ice cream.

ANSWER — E. Brubaker requested a recipe for making ketchup that tastes like the Heinz brand. Thanks to a Paradise reader for sending the following recipe.

Ketchup

2 gallons tomatoes
2 large onions

Cook together tomatoes and onions until tender. Put through a strainer. Add and cook one hour:

8 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon oil
½ teaspoon clove oil
2 cups vinegar

Add:

8 cups sugar
10 tablespoons clear jel

Cook additional 30 minutes. Can in boiling water bath according to canner directions.

ANSWER — Helen Krupski wanted to know why her cheesecakes sink in the middle. Thanks to Audrey Balogh, Bloomsbury, N.J., who writes that she knows of two rememdies. One costs about $9 and the other is absolutely free by using items she most likely already has in her home.

1. Wilton makes cake pan collars, which are silvery looking bands to soak in water and wrap around the cake pans so that the outside does not bake faster than the center (which is why the outside of the cheesecake is drier and stands while the moist center falls). The collars come in a package of two, which will fit around 8- and 9-inch pans. The collars are available in cake decorating stores for $9.

2. Use a "bain Marie" (French for Marie's bath). Take a pan that is at least two-inches larger than the springform pan. Place the unbaked cheesecake in center of the larger pan. Cover the outside of the springform pan with aluminum foil to guarantee no leaks. Pour hot water into the outside pan at least two-inches up the side of the springform pan (I use a roasting pan). Place both pans in the oven and set the temperature as directed in the recipe. It ususally takes 15 minutes longer for the cheesecake to bake and it may not rise as on the outside. Let the cheesecake and water cool down together for a while before removing the springform pan from the water bath. This method guarantees that you will not have a crater.

Research Could Be 'Berry' Good News

A lot of berries contain vitamin C and are high in fiber. But are there other health benefits, too?

Many researchers believe there are. In fact, human clinical trials are starting at Ohio State University to see if benefits seen in lab rats are also evident in humans.

Researchers have been investigating health benefits of strawberries, raspberries and black raspberries for years. They have found that, in rats, at least, berries can inhibit the metabolism of some carcinogens, so there are fewer "mutational events" that can lead to cancer. They also appear to slow down the growth rate of pre-cancerous cells.

Specifically, researchers fed cancer-induced rats a diet consisting of 5 percent to 10 percent of freeze-dried black raspberries over a nine-month period. The diet reduced the development of colon tumors by 50 percent, and reduced the development of malignant colon tumors by 80 percent. Similarly, in 25-week studies, strawberries and black raspberries reduced the incidence of esophageal cancer by 50 percent to 60 percent. Now, they are seeing if berry compounds can help humans in similar ways.

The clinical trials focus on two precancerous conditions: Barrett's Esophagus and Familial Adeno-mateous Polyposis (FAP). In Barrett's Esophagus, the lining of the esophagus goes through cellular changes caused by acid reflux, leading to a type of cancer called esophageal adenocarcinoma. FAP is a rare genetic disease in which polyps develop in the colon. If left untreated, they can develop into colorectal cancer. Some polyps return even after they have been surgically removed.

Just what is it about berries that can help reduce cancer? For one thing, they contain a lot of poly-phenolic compounds, such as ellagic acid. These compounds have been shown to possess anti-mutagenic and anti-oxidant properties. But researchers suspect that other phytonutrients also play a role.

Scientists are just beginning to understand phytonutrients in fruits and vegetables. Soon, the public will be able to learn more about them as the Produce for Better Health Foundation teams up with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to build a database of which phytonutrients are found in fruits and vegetables. The database is scheduled to be completed this fall.

Emerson Martin fashioned this doll-sized bed to mirror a family-owned antique called a "King's Bed." The reproduction will be auctioned at the Lititz Area Mennonite School, June 23.

King's Bed Fit For A Doll

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

AKRON (Lancaster Co.) — It's a "King's Bed," but neither a king nor a queen will be sleeping in it.

Instead the doll-sized bed is guaranteed to make somebody's little princess incredibly happy. The bed is just big enough to fit the popular 18-23-inch dolls that little girls love.

The bed will go to the highest bidder at the Lititz Area Mennonite School Benefit, June 22-23.

Emerson Martin fashioned the bed out of oak copying the design of a family-owned antique bed.

"It's built to last. This won't come apart," Martin said of his creation.

He is well known for his custom built pieces, which he makes by order and for many benefit sales.

Give him a picture of room-sized furniture, a truck, or a toy, and Martin will draw a blueprint and make whatever a customer desires. He is perhaps best known for cattle trucks that he makes to scale with moving parts and details that look exactly like miniature versions of the tractor and trailer trucks that dominate the highways. Several styles of his trucks have been auctioned during past years. Martin also makes furniture for homes. Bunk beds, tables, computer desks, plant stands—almost every piece of furniture used in a home—Martin has made.

"Some people buy the trucks, bulldozers, and other toys to sit on the shelf. But I make them to play with. They aren't glued together. They're put together for keeps," Martin said of his workmanship.

One of 12 children growing up, Martin said he and his brothers made their own toys. They lived near an unused quarry where a local business dumped wooded fruit crates. The siblings salvaged the wood to make an amazing array of toys.

"The wood was just the right thickness for that," Martin said.

Even with that childhood experience, Martin may not have become as proficient in wood working today if it hadn't been for a medical challenge.

When Martin was 18 years old, he was diagnosed with epilepsy, a neurological disorder.

"At first it (diagnosis) gave me the blues, but now I'm calmer and it doesn't scare me like it used too," Martin said.

Raised on a farm, Martin wanted to farm. After he married, he did farm for three years. But small seizures while operating equipment made Martin realize that he needed to give up driving automobiles, tractors, and other equipment.

It was difficult to give up driving and his farming career. Martin got a job at a well known kitchen cabinet shop where he has worked in the finishing department for 33 years.

"I'm not allowed to operate machinery," Martin said.

"But when I'm home, I make things and work at my own speed," Martin said.

That means he is operating a whole shop full of woodworking machinery.

The satisfaction he derives from it is soothing to Martin. He said, "The doctor told me not to sit around and feel sorry for myself but to keep busy."

He need not have given that advice. Martin said, "Growing up in a big family on the farm, I was used to keeping busy. You don't sit around. You stay occupied."

Martin also plays a violin, and enjoys accompanying several of his brothers who play other instruments.

But most of his spare time is spent in his wood shop. He and his wife Mary have five adult children and two grandchildren. With their requests and orders from friends and neighbors, Martin always seems to have some woodworking project to keep him occupied.

The King's Bed promises to be a popular request. "This is bed number three," Martin said of the orders.

The bed will be auctioned at 1 p.m. on June 23 at the Lititz Mennonite School. See sidebar for additional information about the benefit sale.

Junior Kids Build A Playhouse, Help People In Need At The Same Time

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SPRINGS (Somerset Co.) — Junior kids at the Springs Mennonite Church are learning to build a real play house. It will be a neat place with curtains and a roof over the porch.

No doubt it will be spruced up like dad's and mom's house.

The kids belong to a group called the Junior Youth Fellowship (JYF). The whole idea is to give away the playhouse to the Tri-State Relief Sale. When somebody at the sale buys the playhouse for a youngster the money he pays will support missions. The sale is planned for July 21 at the Garrett County Fairgrounds in McHenry, Md. It is beside a nifty body of water called Deep Creek Lake.

Basically, that is how JYF is helping Mennonite Central Committee.The sale money is used to bring hope to people in the world who have almost nothing.

Instead of three long words people say the initials "MCC" when they talk about Mennonite Central Committee.

Since they are beginners, the kids are doing simple and basic carpentry jobs. Their leader, Jesse Maust, knows how real houses have to be built. The first thing you need to before you can build even a playhouse, is a plan, or a blueprint.

Jesse Maust's wife, Karen, is helping to direct the project. She and the JYF girls will make pretty curtains for the windows before the auctioneer takes bids for the house.

When framing began, the boards (studs) were in a vertical (up and down) position, the kids where shown how to drive in nails of a special size, to fasten the studs to the board that was in a horizontal (across) position. 'What are you doing?" someone asked the group.

'I am learning to bend nails," JYF'er Larry Beitzel said, looking pretty innocent.

Everybody laughed because they knew the nails must go in straight.

That is how a wall gets built. Everything must be level so the house will not be lopsided when the walls, floor, and roof are all connected.

It takes a lot of measuring. When a nail goes in wrong it has to be pulled out and a new one hammered in.

Half the kids are assigned carpentry work the others gather around Janet Bender and Rosie Cupler to hear stories from the mission field. Then the groups switch places.

All over the world when disasters like earthquakes, hurricanes, tornadoes, war, famine and disease happen, MCC gives special kinds of help to the sad families. The reason MCC does this is to show people who don't know it, that God loves them.

It takes a lot of money for MCC to do that. That is why people in western Pennsylvania, western Maryland, and West Virginia are planning the Tri-State Relief Sale in the first place. To raise thousands of dollars for MCC.

Sales just like this one are held in the very large countries of the United States and Canada.

Speaking of playhouses, a bright red one with nifty curtains and a porch that has a roof over it sits next to Frisky's doghouse. Frisky is not permitted to run through the neighborhood but his owner takes him on nice walks.

'Frisky" is painted in letters over the arch doorway of his doghouse. The place looks very comfortable, but Frisky won't stay in it. Even though he is on a chain Frisky has enough line to amble next door where he prefers to lay on the playhouse porch, instead.

He looks very funny, as if he is waiting for his master to come home.

Kids love playhouses. So do dogs. That is why Frisky is stretched out on the porch here instead of at his own house a few feet away. This playhouse is at Phil and Janie Moser's place near Salisbury. The JYF playhouse will be of a different style.

It doesn't look like much of a playhouse, but kids in the Junior Youth Fellowship have just begun to build it. Adults Jesse and Karen Maust are directing the project. After they are built separately, four walls will be joined and a roof will go on top. Each JYF'er must take a turn pounding in several nails.

Kids Messing Around In Dirt

"Little Miss Muffet sat on her tuffet, eating her curds and whey. When along came a spider..."

Well, you know the rest. Usually, this is the first introduction to gardening for young children. Of course, it isn't long before they are busy playing in sand piles, making mud pies, and even filling their small pockets with critters. Children love the dirt, so why not teach some fun gardening skills and enjoy some special times together. You can teach about good and not-so-good bugs, develop a mini-science lab, to be resourceful, and best of all patience!

Depending on the age of the child, teaching about bugs can be lots of fun for example, make a bug hotel. Put a little moist soil in the bottom of a jar, cover with plastic wrap with vents secure with a rubber band, and add few twigs and leaves for the bugs to crawl over. Walk through the yard, nearby park, or your own garden collecting different types of bugs. Naturally, stay away from anything that owns a stinger! If you are lucky enough to catch a praying mantis, you might like to add a couple of flies or even a spider for its lunch. Don't put two mantises in the "hotel."

Ladybugs are wonderful to add to your collection as well as a few "lightning bugs" or even a couple of worms. Here is a great place to talk about how pests can be beneficial. Talk about how ladybugs love aphids while worms help to break up and loosen the soil. Just a couple of tips, leave the jar only in the shade, add a little water occasionally and return the bugs to the "wild" the next day.

If you don't have a place for a garden, don't worry. Kids can enjoy growing plants in coffee cans, milk cartons, or even an old swimming pool. Just make sure there are plenty of drainage holes and enough room for the root systems. Container gardening is great for growing any type of lettuce, radishes, herbs, tomatoes, and other vegetables. Make sure the plants receive adequate sun, moisture, and fertilizer. Container gardening can be done anywhere and the results can be great fun for children. Studies show that children who grow or who are involved in growing their own vegetables are more likely to eat them. What better way to teach good nutrition than by growing your own vegetables?

If you're positive you don't have room for a garden or can't manage a container garden, then try what is called "Kitchen Gardening." All you need is an avocado or a sweet potato. If using an avocado, save the pit, let it dry out for a day or two, then carefully remove the brown skin. Stick in three toothpicks and put the avocado with the pointy end up into a glass of water (the toothpicks will aide in keeping the avocado suspended in water).The bottom should always be resting in water. Make sure it is placed in a sunny area and be sure to replace the water every three or four-days. When you see a root starting at the bottom, you can move it to a container with dirt. In three or four weeks with water and fertilize, you will have a start of an avocado tree!

Growing a sweet potato is done much the same way — insert three toothpicks into a sweet potato and place in a container of water. It will need light, but not necessarily a lot of sun. In about a week, the potato will sprout and start growing leaves. The vine will last several months as long as you remember to give it fresh water every few days.

Getting dirty is just half the fun — being together and learning how things grow is what memories are made of. For more information on gardening, visit the Penn State Cooperative Extension Website (www.cas.psu.edu), call your local extension master gardener program, or visit your local library. A great book on gardening with children is "Kids Gardening" by Kevin Raftery and Kim Gilbert Raftery.

Hoorah! One wall of the playhouse is finished. Good job, Junior Youth Fellowship. When it has been completed the playhouse will be sold to make money for missions at the Tri-State Relief Sale on July 21 in McHenry, Md.

Garden Tour To Benefit Historical Society

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Sweeping views of miles of rural countryside surround the 1759 stone farmhouse of Ira and Jane Grushow, 213 Meadow Valley Rd., Ephrata. The view is so breathtaking that it often takes a few minutes before visitors noticed the expansive gardens that encircle the property.

"These are not typical Pennsylvania Dutch gardens," Jane said. Her voice belies a strong English accent that alludes to the telltale influence of English gardens.

Characteristic of the English influence is the crumbling ruins of the original farmhouse that stands next to the Grushow's home, which was called the householder's house in previous centuries.

The Grushows purchased the property about 20 years ago, and the gardens have been a work in process since then.

Jane said that she quickly realized that English gardening techniques are not completely adaptable in this climate. In England, gardening is done almost year around. The climate doesn't have the extreme flunctuations in temperatures that Lancaster County does and perennials usually bloom for much longer periods of time.

"We must work harder and faster over here," Jane said of the hot, humid weather that can play havoc with plants and cause a garden to be "beset" by weeds.

But this climate does have its benefits.

"Here we can grow corn and tomatoes. I wouldn't want to be without them," she said.

Separate areas are set aside for herbs, perennials, shrubs, and rock gardening. Included are areas planted with fruit trees and vegetables.

Ideas for gardening are gathered from numerous publications and the many organizations of which Jane is a member. These include the North American Rock Garden Society and numerous local and gardening clubs as far away as Philadelphia.

"A garden is never finished. It requires time, money, and effort," Jane said.

She said, her gardens just evolved without a well-thought-out plan. She sometimes inserts plants in areas where they don't do well and will transplant them to another side of the house.

Despite tedious attention, the mystery of why some plants bloom profusely and others die is discouraging to many gardeners. Over the years, Jane has adapted a different philosophy toward struggling specimens. She said, "I used to nurse sick plants, but often still ended up with just that — a sick plant. So now I just put it out of its misery, pull it out, and throw it away."

The Grushow gardens and others will be open for tour Saturday, June 23, from 9:30-2 p.m. The $10 ticket price includes a map. Tickets may be purchased from the Historical Society, 249 W. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522 or call (717) 733-1616. Tickets are also available at each site included on the tour.

The event benefits the Historical Society of the Cocalico Valley. The tour offers boundless ideas for water gardening, raised gardens, plantings for shady and sun-drenched areas, unusual shrubbery, trees, flowers, and plants, and even railroad gardening. Included on the tour are the following gardens:

- George and Lois Sisianna, 212 N. Academy Dr., Ephrata.
- Harold and Jo Rutt, 580 Stevens Rd., Ephrata.
- Edwin and Brenda Sensenig, 188 S. Market St., Lincoln.
- Donald and Janice Weaver, 112 S. 10th St., Akron.
- Ronald and Doris Reese, 939 Walnut St., Akron.
- Millard and Janet Carroll, 245 Hemlock Rd., Ephrata.
- Eicher Arts Center, Cocalico St., Ephrata Park, where cookies and creme will be served. The Indian Museum Shop will also be open.

Surrounding the stone farmhouse of Ira and Jane Grushow are numerous areas designated for herb, fruit, vegetable, shrub, flower, and rock gardens.

Makes 3 dozen cookies.

I found this recipe in a 1993 Pillsbury Classic Cookbook. This is a cookie that keeps well. The flavor improves with sitting overnight — if they last that long!

CHICKEN NUGGETS

3 medium chicken breasts, cut into small chunks — about 1 inch squares or smaller
1-quart buttermilk
4 teaspoons lemon juice

Mix together and spoon over chicken pieces. Put in refrigerator for 3-4 hours to marinate.

2¼ cup flour
1½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons celery salt
3 teaspoons garlic salt
3 teaspoons black pepper
3 teaspoons baking powder

Mix thoroughly. Drain chicken pieces from buttermilk, etcetera. Then coat chicken with flour mixture. Fry in deep fat at 365 degrees for about 5 minutes or until golden brown.

My husband and I live on a dairy farm with our 3- and 4-year-old sons. We use many dairy products. We love these tender nuggets. I always substitute the chicken with turkey. We live next to turkey barns, which belong to my husband's parents. Needless to say, we eat lots of turkey. Keep up the many recipes, I love trying new things.

CROCK-POT MACARONI

½ cup butter, chunked
2 cups uncooked macaroni
2 cups shredded sharp cheese
24-ounces small curd cottage cheese
2½ cups boiling water

Place chunks of butter in bottom of Crock-Pot. Add macaroni, shredded cheese, cottage cheese. Pour boiling water over all; do not stir.

Cover. Cook on high until hot; then turn on low. Cook for approximately two hours. Stir just before ready to serve. Sprinkle a little cheese on top for color.

Can be baked in oven, 350 degrees for one hour.

This is not a family recipe yet. This is an office recipe. The girls I work with at the office are like family. We often have lunches where we bring our favorite dish and the Crock-Pot macaroni is one dish that my co-worker must bring. It is one of our favorite dishes and we eat the whole thing.

I am now introducing the recipe to my family. In fact, I had it on Memorial Day and my family enjoyed it very much.

This is one easy recipe that gets high marks at an office or family get-together.

CROCK-POT TAPIOCA PUDDING

2 quart milk
1 cup sugar
1 cup small pearl tapioca

Stir together in a 2½ quart Crock-Pot and cook on high for 3 hours. Watch closely during last hour because it tends to boil over. Tip lid slightly to avoid this. Beat 4 eggs and 2 teaspoon vanilla and add a little hot milk from the Crock-Pot. Stir back into the rest of the tapioca. Cook 20 minutes longer. Remove to a bowl and chill. Add whipped cream or fruit of your choice.

This is a simple and delicious recipe. It sure beats stirring it on top of the stove for an hour.

We are dairy farmers from Berks County. We milk around 70 cows. My husband Marlin Nolt and our two children Sarah, 1½, and Keith, 6 months, enjoy eating dairy products very much. So do I. I like to cook using milk and cheeses.

Soon our garden will be producing again. It is lots of work, but well worth it. God is so good to us.

RHUBARB DESSERT

4 cups rhubarb
½ cup water
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup sugar
Jell-O if desired

Wash and cut rhubarb. Cook rhubarb, water, sugar and cornstarch until thickened. Add Jell-O and set aside to cool.

BAKED PINEAPPLE

3 eggs
½ cup milk
8 tablespoons butter, melted
¼ to 1 cup white sugar
20-ounce can crushed pineapple, drained
4-5 slices bread, cubed

My husband Jerry and I are from Danville and Hazleton, respectively, but have lived in Virginia for 19 years. We have 10 acres along the Mattaponi River in Milford. Jerry is building us a home by hand on this site.

We are both registered nurses and work in Richmond.

In our spare time, Jerry works on restoring his Farmall Super A tractor and I quilt, cross stitch, and sew. We love visiting Lancaster County several times each year and always look forward to our weekly edition of Lancaster Farming!!

½ cup flour
2 eggs, beaten
½ teaspoon salt

Yield: Approximately 3 9-inch pies.

Delicious with whipped cream on top.

My mother made these for her large family and we just loved them! Some of us liked them better with spice and so she always put spice in some, and some without. These sure didn't last long in our house.

A special thanks to our mother for all the pies she made for her hungry family over the years.

Love Of Children, Vitamin D Work Magic For Lancaster's Dairy Princess

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Sometimes it's important to know a friend of a friend.

A little pep talk wouldn't hurt, either.

Andrea "Anne" Fisher, 17, daughter of Amos and Jane Fisher, Gap, was crowned Lancaster County Dairy Princess last Saturday at the Farm and Home Center.

Andrea knew little about county dairy promotion. She didn't serve as a dairy maid or ambassador. Though her parents co-own a dairy equipment company, she received most of her inspiration to become princess from Brenda Hoover, Jill Hoover's sister. Andrea and Jill went to the same school — Conestoga Christian School. Andrea is a senior there.

Jill, Gap, was the reigning Lancaster County Dairy Princess until last Saturday evening, when more than 100 friends and family members watched Andrea accept the tiara.

Competition for the crown was tough. There were two candidates. Andrea was selected princess and Heather Brubaker, 20, daughter of Lowell and Deb Brubaker, Manheim, was selected alternate.

Andrea, who enjoys working with children, is also employed part-time as a young child-care provider. Her presentation, entitled "A Visit From the Dairy Fairy," focused on a "relative" of the Tooth Fairy in children's storybook fame.

The Dairy Fairy lets little children know about the importance of calcium in milk for a well-rounded diet.

"When a person's body doesn't have any calcium," said the Dairy Fairy, "then it steals the calcium from the body's bones and leaves them fragile and brittle later in life."

The Dairy Fairy, speaking to a young girl named Cinderella, tells the girl how milk provides the magical Vitamin D. The Dairy Fairy was on a mission, too, to ensure she put the "magic of Vitamin D" into Cinderella's cow, Bess's, milk.

The natural dairy products, noted the Dairy Fairy, are essential to put that shine on "skin, hair, nails, and teeth" for the prince.

"And, oh, if you see the Tooth Fairy," said the Dairy Fairy, "tell her (that) her cousin said hello."

For the impromptu question, "If you could return to any point in history, where would you go and why would you go there?" Andrea answered: back to the Civil Rights movement, because there is a "lot to be done."

After the Civil War, blacks still were treated harshly, said Andrea.

Andrea admires the people "who stood up and made a stand," and that she, too, "would like to make a difference. We treat others like we want to be treated. I think that's important."

The new Lancaster County Dairy Princess, Andrea Fisher, with family.

A new segment of the contest introduced this year was the question put to the candidates: why run for Lancaster County Dairy Princess? Andrea said, "Every second in Lancaster County, seven gallons of milk are produced."

Andrea recognizes the importance of educating children bout how critical the dairy industry is, since fewer and fewer children live on farms. She said she would enjoy being a representative of the "hard work of farmers in the dairy industry."

Andrea's parents, Amos and Jane, are part owners of Fisher and Thompson Equipment, and have always been supporters of the Lancaster County Dairy Promotion Committee. Andrea enjoys reading, sports, drama, and chaperoning and participating in outdoor activities with children. She is a member of a choral group. Andrea has participated in gymnastics and enjoys swimming. She is also employed part-time at a market stand.

Andrea is the oldest of the Fisher children. Her siblings include Samantha, 15; Brooke, 12; and Shawn, 9.

Heather Brubaker, 20, daughter of Lowell and Deb Brubaker, Manheim, was a dairy ambassador in 1997 and dairy darling in 1990. The family owns Hilltop Heritage Holsteins, a 220-acre dairy in Manheim. They milk 186 of the 340 Holsteins they own.

Heather, employed full-time as a licensed cosmetologist at Regis Hair Salon, Lancaster, is also a Mary Kay beauty consultant. She has been a member and officer of the Northwest Dairy Club and a National and Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association member.

Heather exhibits some of her 14 registered Holsteins at local and state shows, an event she and her two sisters, Crystal, 16; Candice, 10; and brother Blake, 14, enjoy with their parents. Heather also helps out with farm chores.

A graduate of Manheim Central High School, Heather was a member of choir and was a varsity cheerleader. She also served as FFA member and has participated in dairy foods judging, dairy cattle judging, and on various committees.

Heather's presentation was "Dorothy In Dairyland."

In "Wizard of Oz" fashion, Dorothy stops by on her way down the Yellow Brick Road to see Mr. Farmer, also known as "Brains."

"I could certainly see you drink your milk," she tells Mr. Farmer. "Just look at those muscles."

Brawn is essential to farm successfully.

For Mrs. Farmer or "Heart," Dorothy pointed out that milk "also gives you energy.

"And what do you need energy for? To run from Mr. Farmer when he chases after you," said Dorothy.

But Dorothy is looking for the way home. So she asks her dog, Toto, "How do we get home, Toto?" She taps her ruby-attired heels and says, "There's no place like home on the farm."

Heather was asked the same impromptu question: if you could go back in time to live at any part in history, to what time would you go, where, and why?

She spoke about being an eighth generation farmer and her willingness to return to the farm's beginnings.

"It would be neat to see how much our farm has grown since that time — what it would be like to farm back then when things were a lot harder than they are now," said Heather.

In the prepared speech, Heather spoke about her life on the farm. For the number one dairy county in the state, "wouldn't it be a privilege and honor to represent (the farmers)?" Heather spoke about the importance of family values and hard work of the dairy farmer, something she "holds very dear in my heart," said Heather.

Her dad and grandpa work long hours, she said, dedicated to the industry. And Heather said there are more housing developments replacing farms. "If we lose this, it would be like losing a part of ourselves," she said.

Judges for the coronation included Mike Isiminger, wife of Junia Isiminger, Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Promotion coordinator and a technician for ABS Global, who, with Junia, care for replacement heifers on their 40-acre farm; Stephanie Sattazahn, second grade teacher at Blue Mountain Christian School; and David Sonnen, biology and environmental science teacher, Cocalico High School.

Jill Hoover, outgoing princess, spoke about her reign and saluted the producers. "Here's to nature's most perfect food and the farmers who produce it for us," she said.

Some dairy ambassadors are returning to assist the princess. Returning for a third year as ambassadors are Laura Hess, daughter of Joe and Linda Hess, Mount Joy, and Kari Martin, daughter of Leonard and Joyce Martin, Ephrata.

Jenna Martin, Kari's sister, is serving a second year as ambassador. Stephanie Donough, daughter of Timothy and Brenda Donough, Bainbridge, and Cheryl Hershey, daughter of Dale and Martha Hershey, Ronks, are also returning to serve a second year.

Young women serving their first year as dairy ambassador include Apryl Becker, daughter of Merle and Janet Becker, Kinzers; Crystal Brubaker, daughter of Deb and Lowell Brubaker, Manheim; Karen Shaub, daughter of Kirk and Shirley Shaub, Leola; Alysha Royer, daughter of Lynn and Sara Royer, Lancaster; and Mary Zeng, daughter of Thomas and Victoria Zeng, Paradise.

Six dairy misses are Angela Becker, daughter of Merle and Janet Becker, Kinzers; Tiffany Donough, Bainbrige, daughter of Timothy and Brenda Donough; Leslie Hoover, daughter of Carole and Gordon Hoover, Gap; Stephanie Kauffman, Denver, daughter of Harold and Anne Kauffman; and Katelyn Ursery and Adrianne Ranck, daughters of Eldon Ranck and Tammy Ursery, Lancaster.

Rounding out the dairy promotion team are the dairy darlings, including Amelia Jean Barley, daughter of Rob and Shellie Barley, Conestoga; Hanna Breneman, Washington Boro, daughter of Jim and Renee Breneman; Candice Brubaker, daughter of Lowell and Deb Brubaker, Manheim; Toni Kauffman and Terri Kauffman, daughters of Harold and Anne Kauffman, Denver; Jennifer Royer, daughter of Lynne and Sara Royer, Lancaster; and Olivia Ursery, daughter of Eldon Ranck and Tammy Ursery, Lancaster.

'Berry' Great Prices For Strawberry Quarts

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Prices for strawberries vary throughout the season, but George Kratzert's payment of $300 for a quart spiked the high side.

"I wanted good quality berries to serve strawberry sundaes in my restaurant (Scoops Ice Cream and Grill, Mountville) and to help out the kids," Kratzert said of his reason for giving the top bid at the Lancaster County 4-H Rotary Roundup.

Grower of the prize-winning berries was Mark Lefever, Quarryville, who was one of 53 4-H participants in the annual event.

Rotary members pay top dollar to the entrepreneurs, who range in age from 8-18, in order to "affirm young people and their commitment to hard work and business ventures."

Jillian Fletcher sells her berries to Andrew Appel for $200. Josiah Rohrer sells his for $80 to Richard Herr of Herr Manufacturing.

More 4-H'ers participated in strawberry projects than ever before, according to Katina Showman, county 4-H agent.

Mark isn't revealing the secret for growing prize-winning berries. He said, "It's a secret, I can't tell."

But the 11-year-old did say that he has 100 plants of three different varieties. He entered Earliglow because they taste sweeter.

The son of Wayne and Janice Lefever put the $300 in savings for a car.

Competition was divided into three categories. Nineteen first-year members presented well-kept project books recording time, effort, and expense. In the first-year division were 25 entries, and 11 4-H'ers qualified for the experienced category with two or more years as an exhibitor.

"The bad part is that you don't get any berries the first year of growing," Jillian Fletcher said. Those first year blossoms must be picked off and discarded to ensure a better yield the following year.

Jillian did all the work of preparing the patch, weeding, watering, and pampering 25 plants last year without any enumeration. But this year, it paid off. The 12-year-old received $200 for a quart of berries from Andrew Appel, a lawyer.

Her secret: "Don't have bunnies." She explained that her friend Megan Parsons grew berries, but wild rabbits devoured them, and Megan had none to enter in the competition.

Jillian, daughter of Michelle and Dean Fletcher, said her neighborhood has many dogs whose barking and chasing keep rabbits away.

"But my dog loves eating strawberries," Jillian said.

Fortunately, her dog doesn't raid the berry batch, but waits for Jillian to pick them and serve them to him.

Jillian's mother attributed the size and flavor of the berries to the compost used in the berry patch. "It's organic and we made it ourselves," she said.

Although this was the first year, Jillian entered, she had an older brother and sister who previously competed, and her mom is the 4-H leader for the Mountville 4-H Berry Club.

Kenton Bucher received $100 for showing the reserve champion berries in the experienced division. Some of his five brothers and a sister previously placed in the top two placings. Kenton, son of Kenneth and Evie Bucher, said that he has 50 plants on the family's Manheim farm.

Wayne Kratzert paid $300 for this box of strawberries. With them, he served strawberry sundaes at Scoops Ice Cream and Grill, Mountville. Kenton Bucher received $100 for showing the reserve berries in the experienced category.

"Sometimes I get tired of picking berries," Kenton said. It's no wonder. He picked from 5 a.m.-8:30 a.m. the morning of the competition.

Josiah Rohrer, 11, placed second in the first exhibitor category. The son of Kevin and Audrey Rohrer, Manheim, sold his berries to Herr Manufacturing for $80.

Judges for the berry and project book competition were Rudy Grove, Lew Middleton, and Gerald Groff. Auctioneer was Harold Keller, Mount Joy.

• When selecting a prospective nursing home, think about what is important to you and your loved one.

Obviously, a skilled staff and safe, attractive surroundings are desirable, but consider other factors, as well. Where is the facility located? Is it near to where friends and family will be able to stop by for a visit with a minimum of difficulty?

Remember, your parents' friends are probably older, too, and may not be able to drive considerable distances, even though they would enjoy staying in touch.

What is the food like? The facility where my father lived did not have a gourmet menu, but it did have the kind of traditional home cooked foods he'd been used to eating all his life, with plenty of choices at each meal to tempt his failing appetite.

How many patients are there to a room? Some folks prefer having a roommate, but for others, privacy is of greater concern. Are bathroom facilities shared? Who does the patient's laundry?

• One of the best places to start "shopping" for a care facility is with your parents and their friends. What homes have they visited and been impressed with?

Stop by and talk with the administrator and ask for a tour. Ask about application procedures and admission fees. Find out about staff turnover; caring for older persons is a very demanding, yet often not well paid job. As a result, some facilities are a revolving door for transient personnel.

One of the best parts about my father's nursing home was frontline staff that remained virtually unchanged during his 22-month stay there. This is a good sign of people who like their job and take pride in doing it.

• Give some advance thought to the affordability of nursing home care. many people assume that Medicare will cover these costs. That is generally not the case. Medicare pays for the first 20 days of skilled nursing care after initial discharge directly from a hospital.

Medicare will pay partially for up to an additional 100 days per year, providing the patient needs skilled nursing care.

Skilled nursing care is probably not what you think it is. It usually translates into being able to benefit from physical or occupational therapy; when progress stops or stalls, eligibility ends. Even so, Medicare only picks up the daily tab in excess of a set figure, currently $93 per day. That is to say, if your nursing care costs $130 per day (which is about average for central Pennsylvania), Medicare pays the nursing home $37 per day while a patient is receiving the required skilled care services.

You may want to investigate the feasibility of obtaining long term care insurance to assist in the payment of ongoing nursing home costs, or you may opt to rely on existing assets. After a patient's personal financial resources are exhausted, Medicaid will cover nursing home costs, but a transfer to a different facility, such as a county government-run nursing home, may be necessary.

• When your loved one is admitted to an extended care facility, make an effort to get to know the staff on a first name basis, and be sure they know who you are, as well. It is important for them to be aware that you are concerned about the well being of your family member. Ask for an informal status report — "How's Dad doing today?"

In happier times, Sue Bowman celebrates her parents' anniversary with them.

Treat the staff with respect — they have a difficult job to do and may be working with a minimum staffing level, at times. Avoid being demanding — these people aren't servants, they are health care personnel. Try to help out if you can; coming to visit around meal times when you can assist your loved one with eating will make you a popular person at this always too busy time for staffers.

And don't forget to show your appreciation for what they are doing for your relative. A kind word is always appreciated, as is the occasional special treat.

We made a habit of providing the staff with baked goods to celebrate my father's birthday, provided little bags of candy for Halloween and brought a nicely decorated poinsettia for the nurse's station at Christmas. The folks on the second shift, when we most often visited, became almost like a second family to us. They cried along with us when Dad died, and we continue to stop by to say hello to them occasionally.

• Make the room at the nursing home as comfortable and familiar as space will permit. My Dad's room had a framed drawing of our barn on the wall. The room's basic furnishings included a hospital bed, a dresser, nightstand and reclining chair. We supplemented with a folding tray table, which came in handy when we fed him in his room, as well as when he wanted to look at reading material or fill out menu selections. Also convenient was having a folding chair(s) available so visitors had a place to sit. Speaking of visitors, one of my father's requests as his memory started to fail, was a small notebook and pen where he could ask visitors to list their names. This helped my Mom and me keep track of who had stopped by to see him, and often those who signed the book would write a little note for us or leave a message, if Dad was asleep when they arrived to visit.

• Most nursing home rooms have a bulletin board on the wall. Post some family pictures, and be sure to include shots of your loved one, as well. These photos are not only familiar and encouraging for the patient, but they also help the staff to see your loved one as a "real person."

It's important for everyone — staff, family and the patient himself — to have a pleasant reminder of better days from the past. Bulletin boards are also a good place to hang up greeting cards or seasonal decorations, which can lend a cheerful touch. Bulletin board contents can serve as springboards for conversation by staff and visitors in an environment where they may not be much new material to talk about.

• It's important to help a nursing home patient keep in touch with the world outside. We made a point of bringing Dad his mail from home and opening it with him. Since he was always a newspaper reader, we brought the daily paper and helped him read his favorite sections. Even when he could no longer follow the newspaper, he continued to enjoy looking at the pictures in his farming magazines.

If the facility's rules permit, bring a small television set from home so your relative can continue to watch the news and favorite programs. My father maintained a considerable interest in local news, so we placed a clock radio on his nightstand and set the radio alarm so that he could listen to area news and weather first thing every morning.

To aid in keeping him oriented to date and time, we had a calendar with large numbers posted within sight of his bed, and we always made a point of reminding him which day of the week it was when we visited. We also called attention to special dates or holidays. Dad remained concerned about the hour of the day, so we provided him with an inexpensive wristwatch.

• Nursing homes try to normalize life for their patients by having them dress in street clothes each day. You will probably need to provide a mix of favorite outfits from home, along with new clothing adapted to any special physical needs. Stiff joints might dictate the need for shirts that open down the back and can be slid into easily from the front. These are available from specialty catalogues, or if you're handy with a needle like my aunt, existing clothes can be modified. Toileting difficulties may require pants which are easy to get on and off. We found that sweat pants with elastic waists worked particularly well. Hard soled slippers soon replaced traditional tie shoes or loafers, which were difficult to get on and off. The nursing home will likely require that your relative's attire be labeled, either with a sewn in name tag or by hand lettering done using an indelible marker.

• Holidays will undoubtedly be challenging times emotionally for all concerned. If your family member is at least somewhat mobile, you may be able to arrange, with the doctor's permission, to have them join you for a home visit. Be aware that this might be a bittersweet occasion. Old memories of happier times will no doubt be stirred up. Your home may not be well adapted to the special needs of someone with a mobility impairment or toileting problems. And, perhaps worst of all, you might find that your loved one has a difficult time returning to the nursing home environment after a visit home.

Other options might include just going for a drive, or having a mini-celebration at the nursing home.

For my Dad's first Christmas away from us, my mother and I arranged to have our Christmas dinner with him in the dining room of the care facility. This worked well for my Dad and also solved our problem about how to get away from our former Christmas traditions. For other special occasions, like my father's birthday or my parents' wedding anniversary, we tried to find ways to let the staff and visitors know about the event, so they could share their well wishes with my Dad.

One effective way of doing this was buying a few colorful helium balloons to put in Dad's room. They not only brightened his day, but also reminded everyone else of the red-letter day. As mentioned before, we would often use such occasions to provide a treat for the staff on my Dad's behalf.

• Nursing facilities are required by law to hold periodic meetings to review patient status and progress. In Pennsylvania, this happens quarterly and/or when a patient returns from a hospitalization. Plan to attend these meetings and be an active part. Be prepared to discuss medications, diagnoses and any concerns about changes in levels of functioning.

You will gain a mutual sense of respect with key players at the nursing home if you opt to become involved in this way. In my father's case, this involvement paid off when his mental condition deteriorated to the point at which it was felt he might need to be transferred to a more specialized type of care facility located outside the area. By continuing to work closely with the administration, we were able to keep Dad close to home where we could continue to play an active role in his care.

• Be good to yourself. Don't let others fool you into thinking that placing a loved one into a care facility is "taking the easy way out." There will be a toll taken both emotionally and physically, as you take steps to remain an important part of your family member's new lifestyle.

Although we tried to visit my father every evening, I still insisted on making time for some basics like taking my aerobics classes after work two nights per week and attending special functions with friends and relatives occasionally.

Because my Dad had an unusual diagnosis and went through numerous health emergencies, I employed a device (suggested by my cousin Carol) to help save my sanity — I kept a diary of my father's condition, as well as notes about what various doctors had said, how he responded to a series of different medications. Initially, I wrote a short paragraph almost every night after returning home from visiting him. This was a valuable tool for sharing accurate information about the progression of his symptoms with assorted medical professionals.

Perhaps more importantly, it served as a catharsis for me — somewhere to go with all those thoughts and feelings which I couldn't continually inflict on friends or coworkers. Toward the end of his life, Dad's days were so similar, there seemed to be little point in committing daily notes to writing any longer. But, even then, it was oddly comforting to read back through this diary of how he had come to be where he was.

Dad's life ended, coincidentally, on my 50th birthday, Oct. 19, 2000. It wasn't a surprise, in that his condition had been declining for so long, yet he'd hung on for such a long time in such poor shape, it still came as a shock. There was no disputing, however, that his passing was a blessing which delivered him from two difficult years of pain and suffering.

His pleasant personality and fun sense of humor were taken from us long before his body was, yet my brother, Mom and I know how fortunate we were to have him with us for his 83½ years. It is a privilege to know that we have a host of happy memories to sustain us and his three grandchildren. My hope is that by sharing our experiences, some other family might benefit at least in some small way from our learning curve in the land of nursing homes.

Social Security Update

The Social Security Administration has clarified the new rulings on the earnings limit.

• For those who are under age 65 for all of 2001, and are employed and drawing Social Security benefits, the earnings limit is $10,680. Earnings above that amount will bring a $1 deduction for each $2 earned.

• For those who are or will turn 65 during 2001, there is a $25,000 earnings limit until the month prior to the month of the 65th birthday. From the month the person turns 65 and the rest of the year, there are no deductions made from the Social Security benefit.

• For those who are 65 or over all of 2001, there is no limitation on earnings.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

June is the month for roses, but ours did not fare too well this winter although some have sprouted. My three miniature rose bushes are blooming just now.

What we do have plenty of are strawberries. As we watered them during the dry weather, it did not hurt them very much. Last year I froze 38 quarts, but we really don't need that many again. We will share them with others.

Even my sugar peas have not grown as high as usual. Many years they are taller than I am, but not this year. I freeze a lot, but there is nothing like eating them fresh from the garden with new potatoes.

Last week we had the pleasure of eating lunch with our son from Delaware. He was at Harrisburg and phoned to see if we were available. It is so easy to lose touch with family. Some of our children phone us regularly while others only remember now and then.

The other week we ate out several times as one day was my birthday and another was Allen's high school reunion. It has been 66 years since he graduated from Elizabethtown High School. The group grows a bit smaller every year, but they enjoy each other's company, and they still have two teachers living.

Our youngest daughter has moved her family to Maine. Their baby is 8 months old and the other two boys are 3 and 6 years old. The first night they slept in an empty house as the moving truck with the furniture had not arrived. Her job takes her to many states, but we're so glad she can still visit us.

Bobbie Sue Adams Crowned Dairy Princess For Wyoming-Lackawanna Counties

FACTORYVILLE (Wyoming Co.) — Bobbie Sue Adams of Sugar Run was crowned the Wyoming/Lackawanna Dairy Princess at the annual dairy princess pageant conducted recently at the Factoryville Fire Hall.

The daughter of Robert and Rose Adams, Bobbie Sue is actively involved in her family's dairy operation and is a junior at Wyalusing Valley Junior/ Senior High School.

Assisting her in the promotion of the dairy industry is Alternate Princess Becky Carr. Becky is the daughter of Paul and Patricia Carr of Tunkhannock, and is employed at the Factoryville Sportsman Club and at Henningstead Holsteins, Mehoopany.

Throughout the evening, Bobbie Sue and Becky were judged on skit, speech, interview with the judges, and impromptu questioning.

For the skit competition, Bobbie Sue entertained the 60 attendees with her skit about being a dairy "robber" and showing the audience the dairy feast she is going to have. During her dairy skit, Becky went hunting through the woods for her dairy "game" taking her time to find the right "target" to get to eat.

After deliberating for some time, the judges selected to place the crown and banner on Bobbie Sue's head. Assisting Bobbie Sue and Becky for the year will be Dairy Maid Denise Hardisky, Nicholson; Dairy Ambassador Billy Anderson, Tunkhannock; and Rachel Smarkusky, Nicholson.

The Wyoming Lackawanna Dairy Princess and court will promote the dairy industry in the Wyoming and Lackawanna area at elementary schools, farm meetings, non-farm meetings, county fairs, and other events.

The judges for the pageant were Eileen Murphy, former state alternate princess, Dushore; Cynthia Sopka, Wilkes University, Wilkes Barre; and Steven Van Kuren, Van Kuren Farms, Montrose.

Jean Manning of Manning's Dairy of Dalton was selected as Dairy Woman of the Year. Jean has worked with her family to continue the promotion of the dairy industry through the hosting of school tours, store promotions, and the donation of dairy products to promotions conducted by the dairy princess court. This award is given to recognize a woman, residing in Wyoming or Lackawanna County, who has gone above the call of duty in the promotion of the dairy industry.

The Tunkhannock FFA Chapter was named the outstanding agricultural organization of the year. Working with the Dairy Princess Program, the Tunkhannock Chapter has assisted in several promotion efforts such as the design of floats for parades, the organization of an agriculture in the classroom program for Tunkhannock Area School District, and other promotions as well. The FFA organization was recognized for its donation of time and effort for the promotion of the dairy industry.

The Wyoming Lackawanna Dairy Princess Program is a non-profit organization that promoted the dairy industry in the Wyoming and Lackawanna County Area. For more information on the program and how to have royalty assist in a promotion, call Charlene Shupp at (570) 836-4731.

2 cups milk
3 quarts boiling water
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
2 cups grated American cheese (1 pound)

This recipe came from my mom. It is quick and easy to make and I make it quite often. Also, the tablespoon salt that is cooked with the macaroni. I don't use that much salt because I think that is too much salt. So I only use 1 teaspoon salt, which I think is plenty. Enjoy.

Combine sweet potatoes and milk in mixing bowl and mix on medium speed until mashed potato consistency (about one minute).

In medium bowl, mix together brown sugar, butter, and oatmeal until well mixed and crumbly (Will form ball when squeezed together). Reserve ½ cup oatmeal mixture and add remainder to sweet potato mixture. Place in buttered 2-quart baking dish, sprinkle reserved ½ cup oatmeal mixture on top.

Bake uncovered in preheated 350 degrees oven for 40-45 minutes. Let set 5-10 minutes before serving. Serves 4-6.

My husband, Stephen, and I are the parents of one, Shellbi, 5.

Stephen works with his father on the family farm, raising broiler chickens, steers, and crops.

I'm a stay-at-home mom. I enjoy gardening, crafts, and watching our daughter blossom.

Shellbi is anticipating trips to Knoebel's Park and to Ocean City, Md., and turning six in August.

We hope everyone enjoys their summer.

Dairy Goats Provide More Than Milk

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

WHITE HALL, Md. — Connie Schildtknecht first began milking goats in the late 1980s to provide easily digestable milk for her family.

The herd grew quickly and "to justify having the goats" she also began using the milk to make soap.

Now a steady stream of people knock at Schildtknecht's door on Oasis Farm to buy bars of her home-made goat's milk soap.

As her involvement with the goats and a variety of other animals on the small farm increased, Schildtknecht went to work milking cows for a local dairy farmer. Although the main reason for taking the job was to pay for the goat feed, she said she learned a lot about dairying in the process.

She was able to quit the job as her soap business picked up and the goats began to pay for themselves.

Of the six major dairy goat breeds found in the U.S., Schildtknecht prefers Nubians and Alpines because they are easy milkers and high producers, making up to a gallon and a half per day on a diet of 18-percent protein sweet feed, alfalfa hay, and some pasture.

To those unfamiliar with the subtleties of dairy goat breed distinctions, a simple way to tell the difference between a Nubian and an Alpine is by the ears. Nubians have large floppy ears, while the those of the Alpine are smaller and erect.

Connie's 13 year-old son Reuben Schildtknecht owns one of a third breed of dairy goat. "Lovey" is a yearling Lamancha doe, yet to produce milk. Reuben said he will be showing her at the local 4-H fair this fall.

The easiest way for an amateur to identify this breed is also by the ears. The Lamancha has the smallest ears of all, barely more than an inch long.

Connie's husband Rick Shildtknecht is supportive of his wife's goat and soap-making operation, helping out with any construction projects as needed.

For now, Connie milks six goats twice a day by hand in a small barn equipped with milking stands — individual wooden platforms that the goats stand on to be milked. She said that each goat knows its own stand, climbing up by itself to be milked.

Rick Schildtknecht plans to expand this small "milking parlor" into a 36-by-40 foot barn with stalls, a birthing pen, larger parlor, and hay loft overhead.

The soap-making venture began in the kitchen, but quickly outgrew it and was moved into another outbuilding on the property.

There Connie Shildtknecht starts with the age-old raw ingredients of lard or tallow and lye to make potfuls of raw soap. After this crude but functional product is hardened for two weeks, she grinds it into bits.

Next she adds the goat's milk — at about a one-to-one ratio with the raw soap — as well as essential oils, herbs from Oasis Farm, and possibly other ingredients such as oatmeal (for softening) or jewelweed (for poison ivy relief.)

A rosewater and glycerin recipe produces what Rick Schildtknecht calls his wife's "signature soap."

After mixing, the customized soap and goat's milk product must harden for another two weeks, making the total time required to complete the process a minimum of four weeks.

"Nobody would go to all the trouble (to make the soap for themself,)" Schildtknecht said.

With the help of a three-pot stirrer designed by her brother, however, she can produce about 50 bars of soap at a time.

The final product is wrapped in muslin to let the soap "breathe."

According to Schildtknecht, lipoproteins and lactic acid in goat's milk make it ideal for human skin. Lipids help seal in moisture and prevent dryness and cracking, while the lactic acid allows skin to renew itself faster.

Schildtknecht also makes spread cheese and yogurt from the milk. She once tried to make ice cream, but Reuben made it impossible to finish the job.

"He kept eating it before it was ready," she said.

Shildtknecht has sold her goat's milk to dog breeders and used it to feed laying hens, veal calves, and orphaned livestock.

She also donates baskets of goat's milk soap products to various causes, including cancer walks and 4-H club events.

Connie and Reuben Schildtknecht are members of the American Dairy Goat Association (ADGA), an organization with more than 13,000 members in 50 states and other countries.

The ADGA registers over 40,000 dairy goats annually, maintains production records through the national DHIA, administers rules for the showing, judging and type-scoring of dairy goats, and provides genetic management for breeders.

National Dairy Goat Awareness Week is conducted annually from the second to third Saturdays in June.

Connie Shildtknecht with four of her milking goats. The three floppy-eared goats are Nubian and the one with smaller ears is an Alpine. Shildtknecht chose these breeds for ease of milking and high production. She makes custom soap and a variety of other products with the milk.

Reuben Schildtknecht feeds alfalfa hay to the dairy goats. The goats produce up to a gallon and a half of milk per day on a diet of sweet feed, hay, and some pasture.

Reuben Schildtknecht with "Lovey", his yearling Lamancha doe. He plans to show her at the Baltimore County 4-H fair this fall.

Connie Schildtknecht shows off a three-pot automatic stirrer she uses in making soap. Designed by her brother, the stirrer mixes enough raw ingredients to make about 50 bars of soap. Because the original fat/lye mixture requires precise temperatures and an hour of stirring, Schildknecht said the stirrer saves her an enormous amount of time and work.

Three University Of Delaware Students Named Crossan Agricultural Scholars

NEWARK, Del. — University of Delaware students, Andrew 'Zack' Skibo, Bradley D. Thompson and Joanna M. Wagner have been named Donald F. Crossan Agricultural Scholars for 2001-2002.

These annual scholarships, awarded to either sophomores or juniors for academic achievement and an interest in agriculture as a career, are made possible by the UD Agricultural Alumni association and friends of Dr. Donald F. Crossan, former dean of the UD College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Andrew 'Zack' Skibo, a junior earning a dual major in animal science and plant sciences, served a stint in the U.S. Air Force before enrolling at UD. He is an Ag Ambassador, a Dean's Scholar and treasurer of the Animal Science Club. He plans to earn a doctorate in plant science and become a vineyard or orchard manager.

Thompson, a sophomore landscape horticulture major, is a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta academic honor society, the National Society of Collegiate Scholars and student representative of the UD Botanic Gardens. From Street, Md., Thompson grew up in the family business — Foxborough Nursery — to which he plans to return after graduation. He hopes to expand on the existing business to include a cut-branch production enterprise, supplying holly and hydrangea branches to florists and garden centers.

Wagner, also a sophomore majoring in landscape horticulture, is a Dean's Scholar, a UD Merit Scholar and the recipient of several garden-related scholarships. Active in college groups, she is vice president of the Ornamental Horticulture Club, a member of Alpha Zetz Fraternity and a representative to the Agriculture College Council. A native of Wrightstown, Wagner chose ornamental horticulture as a field because she wants a job in which she can "create living works of art for everyone to enjoy."

The spool bed with rope bottom and rye straw mattress, woven bedspread, and clothing have been donated by local people who want to preserve the past so that future generations may enjoy the historical significance of early America.

The Thomas R. Brendle Museum, which previously served as the town center, contains a rich collection of furniture, house furnishings, and items that reflect the Pennsylvania Dutch culture.

Peek Into 'Schaefferstown Attic' Uncovers Historical Wealth

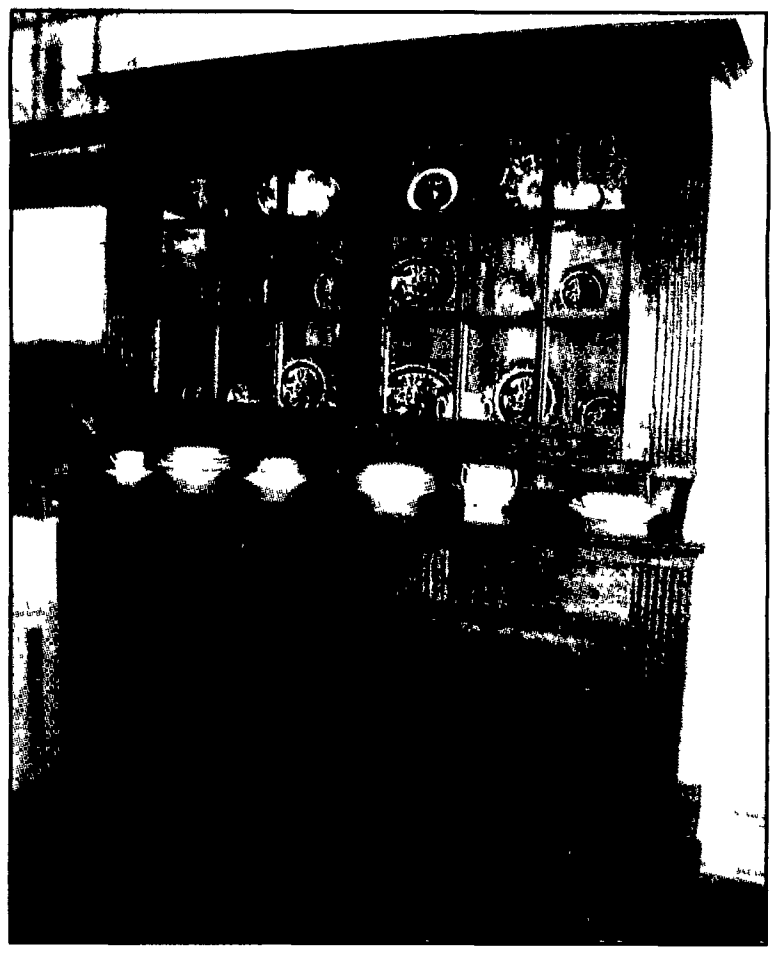
SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Although historical societies do not sell antiques, these community organizations offer educational insight that can help collectors identify dates and uses of rare items.

One of these rich sources of information is the historic Alexander Schaeffer Farm and the Thomas R. Brendle Museum, which will be open for tour Sat., June 23 during Schaefferstown's annual Cherry Fair and Early American Craft Show. In addition to numerous fun and educational events planned to preserve the culture and history of the Pennsylvania Germans, the day enables people a peek into "Schaefferstown's Attic," which includes a substantial collection of antiques from the area.

Diane Wenger, one of the tour guides, said that the purpose of both the museum and the farm is to preserve the rich local history, architecture, and culture.

"We are the present, preserving the past, so that future generations may enjoy this," Wenger said.

Most antique collectors also enjoy the historical significance that culture played in early America. Pennsylvania German history was predominate in Schaefferstown.



The Dutch cupboard or kitchen dresser dates to 1830 and contains the original wavering glass. Inside the cupboard are collections of flow blue and Blue Willow china that were used and donated by former residents of the area.

Indian artifacts such as these arrowheads, ax heads, and pottery shards were found in the vicinity of the Schaeffer farm. Historians have determined that the unusual amount of pottery shards found in the area suggests a large settlement of the Delaware or Lenape Indian tribe had at one time lived in the Schaefferstown area.

The 90-acre Alexander Schaeffer Farm was owned by Alexander Schaeffer, the town's founder. The limestone Swiss bank-style house was built in 1746 with a 1771 addition and retains many of its original features such as an arched cold cellar and beehive oven. A pigsty and smokehouse from the same era also survived.

Schaeffer purchased the land in 1758, and laid out a planned village with a central market square and market house.

Today the museum includes relics that show the progression of history. On display are an ice refrigerator and ice tongs, which were used to load ice cut from ponds during the winter and stored in straw in underground ice houses.

Tools, butchering equipment, old bills, receipts, saddler's bench, harnesses, bridles, and other items show how history has evolved.

Reconstructed in the museum is a Victorian parlor with its horsehair-covered furniture, which is reported to be itchy and slippery by those who remember sitting on it.

Revoking nostalgia of the early 20th century are such items as a

This ice cream maker with the drum set on its side is housed in a wooden frame and thought to be made about the turn of the century.

treadle organ, a copy of the town newspaper that sold for a penny a copy, and instruments and uniforms from the town band that had been formed to uphold the patriotic spirit following the Civil War.

Pennsylvania Germans believed witches could put hexes on people and make them or their animals sick. To remove these hexes, they often went to a pow wow doctor, who used a form of magic or "pow wow" that included chanting Bible verses to break evil spells. On display is a pow wow chair, in which the rungs and unique size is said to hold religious significance.

The town hall once served a vital role in the community. It was the place where plays, spelling bees, and silent movies were held. At one time, several cigar factories were active in Schaefferstown and items from these are also displayed in the museum.

Brendle, whom the museum was named after, was said to have loved history and his heritage and worked hard to collect folk sayings, poems, songs, and proverbs typical of the Pennsylvania German culture. These are preserved in 100 notebooks.

Historic Schaefferstown published a volume of the Brendle Folklore Collection, which is for sale in hardback and paperpack at the museum.

In addition to special celebrations such as the Cherry Fest, the museum is open every second and fourth Sunday, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., and by appointment.

For more information on special events or to schedule a tour, call (717) 949-2444.

Book Collectors

Today collectors abound from every walk of life and from every generation. They also hail from every educational level and every financial station.

The profile of the "new millennium" collector is much harder to define than a collector of 20 years ago. What they fancy runs the gamut from art and antiques to retro jewelry and limited first edition books.

Collectors are one group that seems unphased by the bull and bear markets. In fact, according to Fran Graham, former editor in chief of Antiques and Collecting Magazine, during challenging economic times collectors believe that investing in the collection is safer than putting money in an unpredictable stock market. Considering a first edition book signed by Dr. Seuss sells for $4,800 and a 1952 hardcover first edition Charlotte's Web with dust jacket can command $1,500, it's not hard to see why.

According to The Antiques Roadshow Primer, a modern first edition book in good condition with its dust jacket is worth at least five to 10 times the price of a collectible book without the dust jacket — so try to keep those dust jackets in mint condition as well.

VOICES OF EXPERIENCE

Antiques Questions And Answers

My husband and I inherited the Joliet wooden two-hole corn sheller in this photo. Possibly 1920s/30s. Any idea of how to sell it?

T.S. — Manilla, IA

Your best bet would be to contact an auction house specializing in farm equipment, in your area.

I found 10 books on the pictorial history of the second World War published by Wm. H. Wise & Co. in 1950. They list Congressional Medal of Honor recipients. How can I find if they are worth anything?

J.K. — Chicago, IL

There are two ways to learn their value. You can contact one of the many rare book dealers in your area or check the yellow pages under professional appraisers or appraisal societies. For a fee, they will research prices.

We found this bronze plaque with the head and bust of a woman in our grandparents attic many years ago. What can you tell me about it?

S.L.O. — Pecono Pines

You didn't say if it has a signature. However, with my magnifying glass, I was able to detect either a foundry mark or initials on the bust portion. As an Art Nouveau style bronze, it could be worth several thousand dollars. It would be worthwhile to show it to a professional appraiser specializing in Art Nouveau bronzes. Take a better picture and show it to a bronze dealer at one of the antique shows.

I am interested in learning more about the bronze sculptor Dubucand. Are there books on his work?

L.G.L.M. — Bethel, CT

Prepare to spend time doing research. There are many books on 19th century bronze sculptors and price guides. Among them "Bronzes: Sculptors and Founders 1800-1930, Vols. 1-4, distributed by Schiffer Publishing.

This silk, embroidered jacket is one of several garments I have from Japan. I would like to know more. How could I find out?

H.C. Tarentum

One of several books on the subject is "The Art of Oriental Embroidery" by Young Y. Chung, published by Charles Scribner and Sons, New York, NY. However, if it is out of print, you might contact the publishing house to see if they can acquire a copy.

We have a couple of antique lamps with hanging crystal prisms, that our grandson constantly knocks over. Where can we get replacements?

N.G. — Cheswick

Most every antique show has a dealer with a box of prisms. Take one of yours along next time for a match up.

Can you tell me if this child's tea set marked "Made in Japan" has any value? It has a picture of a duck and yellow bird. Green trim. A four piece place setting with teapot, sugar, creamer, plates, cups, saucers of china.

R.C. — Braintree, MA

Your complete set could sell in a shop for $200 or more.

THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

French Provincial Furniture Always Popular

Never mind that it has been copied and heavily reproduced since it was first made for the newly wealthy French merchants and peasants in the early 18th centiury. French provincial furniture continues to enjoy non-stop popularity.

Depending where you buy it you can pay a little or a lot. For instance at a Skinner auction Spring sale an 18th century carved pine armoire sold under estimate for $2,415. A dealer or a decorator would probably tag it for $6,000 or more.

The term "French Provincial" refers to pieces made in the French provinces, such as Brittany, Burgundy, and Gascony. Basically it was designed for everyday use, unlike the pieces made in the cities for royalty and the wealthy. The average provincial family used only the most essential pieces such as a cupboard or hutch, closed bed, and straw-bottomed stools and chairs. Extra pieces would be cabinets, several types of buffets, and an armoire (wardrobe) for storage.

The wealthier provinces, such as Burgundy and Gascony, adapted the styles of Louis XIV and XV. In many of the provinces the Louis XV style was made until the end of the 19th century. The Empire style was never used in the provinces.

French provincial carved armoire from the 18th century sold at Skinner auction for $2,415. Photo by Skinner Galleries, Bolton/Boston, Mass.

CLUES: While prices for pieces sold by dealers and decorators are higher, keep in mind you are paying for their knowledge. In the end it could save you from buying a copy or a reproduction. If you like the look it can be recognized by its' cabriole leg and the carving; usually simple scallops. Other motifs could be shells and flowers, relating to the talents of the carver. Depending on the region it could be painted in a variety of colors and decorated with scenes as well as floral motifs. Plain wood pieces were the most common.

If you can recognize the various wood grains and colors you can identify the region where it was made. For instance in Normandy oak was used; walnut and fruitwoods in Lorraine; and walnut in Savoie. Sometimes imported tropical woods were used in the Saintonge region.

Influences of earlier heritages show up in different regions. For instance, Alsace can be recognized by Germanic or Swiss traces in painting. Normandy often shows Viking touches.

Even the types of hardware reflected the regions. Provence and Limousin used steel mounts as handles and hinges. Normandy had brass fittings. In Lorraine polished steel was often part of the trim.

Since the 19th century, the most popular and reproduced pieces are chests, sideboards and armoires. In fact, beginning in the 1960s the French Provincial look became trendy. Armoires were mass produced by American furniture makers.

In quality and price they ranged from top of the line to budget-priced. both painted and plain. Many come to market and are sold to beginning collectors.

The branded labels or tags have been removed and they are battle-scarred. They look old.

If you are serious about buying an authentic old piece, familiarize yourself with early construction techniques. New wood smells fresh. Take a deep sniff before spending too much. Open drawers and doors. The more expensive armoire reproductions have been made in the old ways by today's skilled carvers and cabinetmakers.

Hopefully if you buy from a dealer or decorator you will get a letter of authenticity or a money back guarantee.

Antiques Questions And Answers

Is there any value to my late mother's celluloid mirror, comb and hair brush that I think date from the 1920s-1930s?

Z.D.-Cincinnati, Ohio

Your pieces are part of a larger vanity set that probably also came in a celluloid box. The three pieces, in good condition could have a shop price of $50.

At a local flea market, I bought an interesting pottery vase with swirling colors in brown and cream. It is marked "Niloak" and is three inches high. I paid $20. Is it a treasure or trash?

S.M.C.-Cincinnati, Ohio

You have a small treasure that would cost you around $150 in a shop. It is known as Mission Ware, first made in 1911 in Benton Arkansas at the Niloak Pottery.

This floral still life painting on copper was done by H. Repke, reputedly one of Hitler's favorite painters. He only painted on copper during the war. He only did still lifes because Hitler requested them. While traveling to Europe on business after the war I saw five such paintings in one of the companies I visited in Germany. I was able to purchase one. Who could help me evaluate it for possible sale?

R.M.C.-Miami Lakes, Fla.

Send good photo and history to Elizabeth Wilson, Senior Specialist, European Paintings, Sotheby's, 1334 York Avenue, New York, NY 10021.

Can you evaluate this silver plate butter dish and tell me the age? It is marked Meriden. The beautifully engraved cover goes back into the dish when opened. Inside is a pierced plate to allow drainage. It has fancy legs and feet. Do you know the age and value?

N.B.K.-Pembroke Pines, Fla.

Your butter dish was made in Meriden, Conn. in the 1850s. In good condition, it could sell in a shop for $200 or more.

Several years ago, I bought a nest of four marquetry inlaid tables signed Gall'e. At the time, I didn't know anything about Gall'e. I just like the tables and they were priced at $400. Now I know Gall'e was famous for his glass and also made pottery and furniture. What could my tables be worth today?

D.F.-Coral Gables, Fla.

At a recent William Doyle auction, a set of four tables, similar to yours sold for over $3,000.

In a trunk in my late grandmother's closet, I found a beautiful black silk umbrella with a carved ivory and sterling silver handle. The ivory had carvings of Oriental ladies. Is it worth anything?

S.F.D.-Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

The next time it rains, you can make a fashion statement with your late 19th century umbrella worth around $300.

I'm a teen-ager who likes collecting stuff. I have been picking up Flintstone and other TV cartoon character things. Recently, I paid $2 for a Flintstone battery car marked Remco. Did I do good?

J.L.-Coral Gables, Fla.

You did real good. In a shop, you'd have to pay $190.

I've been reading a lot in antique papers about lady head vases. I inherited one from my late mother. The woman has long blonde hair with a green hair ribbon and a paper label, "Napco." What can you tell me about it and head vases.

A.A.-Pompano Beach, Fla.

Lady head vases were first made in the early 1940s to the early 1960s. They were inexpensive novelties made in America, Japan and elsewhere. Basically, they are vases and planters in the shape of a woman's head. They have become a hot collectors item in the last two decades, but prices are for the most part, under $100. From your description, you have one of the more popular examples that could sell in a shop for as much as $150.

Grob Receives Annual Award, Life Membership

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Rudolph Grob, long-time director - of the association, was named the recipient of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association Annual Award for 2001 as well as a life membership in the association in recognition of his extraordinary record of service and dedication to the association.

The announcement was made at the Annual Fruit and Vegetable Growers Dinner at the 2001 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey.

Last year, PVGA began the new millennium by instituting an annual award program. In the past, the association presented special recognitions to certain individuals or life memberships to persons who have a longstanding history of service to the association. But the board of directors decided it would be appropriate to annually recognize an individual who has made a special contribution to the association or the vegetable, potato, and berry industries in Pennsylvania.

Grob began working on the Lancaster County vegetable farm of Amos Funk at the age of 12. Early on, Funk recognized his supervisory skills and put him in charge of the raspberry pickers. He continued working at the farm through high school and college. He enjoyed selling produce so much that during college, he came home weekends so he could go to Saturday market.

After graduating from Penn State in 1956 with a bachelor's degree in horticulture and completing the reserve officer training course, he returned to Funk's Farm in Lancaster County. For the next 40 or so years, he worked at the same farm in a variety of positions, but excelling in merchandising produce and providing exemplary customer service as the farm moved from selling their produce primarily at farmers markets to developing a large roadside farm market, and garden center.

Amos Funk, also a PVGA life member and former president, got Grob involved in the Vegetable Growers Association in 1957, where he has served on the board of directors for 43 years, including 14 as secretary-treasurer. During his tenure as secretary-treasurer, there was no executive secretary. Consequently, he was responsible for maintaining all the correspondence, dues collections, meeting minutes, and financial records using a manual typewriter and carbon paper — all for a token salary. He gave up the position in 1971 when he assumed a position on the commander's staff on this Reserve Unit. He retired from the Reserves in 1976 after 20 years of service.

Grob has been a fixture at the registration desk of the vegetable conference since the years when the conference was conducted at the Nittany Lion Inn in State College through the transition to moving the conference to the Hershey Lodge until the present. He has been active in planning the program and details of the convention through the years, especially the retail marketing aspects. He personally has probably sold more vegetable growers on the merits of PVGA membership than anyone else by using his salesmanship talents at the registration desk.

More than 20 years ago, Grob headed up a committee to develop a PVGA food booth at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Beginning with modest sales of a several thousand bowls of vegetable soup, the booth has grown under his leadership to sales of more than $80,000 annually. He has volunteered a week of his vacation time each year since then to manage the soup and salad operations of the food booth — except for three years — twice when he was unable to because of his own health and once because of his mother's health. When the association began a booth at Ag Progress Days, he again volunteered some of his vacation time to help when he could. These two ventures have enabled PVGA to budget $30,000 annually for vegetable and small fruit research.

Delaware Ag Graduate Wins Top Award

NEWARK, Del. — "My father jokes that he wants to be like me when he grows up," Sherri L. Freeman with a laugh. "The truth is I have spent my entire life striving to be like him. My parents have always been my biggest supporters and motivators. If anyone deserves to receive honors, they do."

Freeman, a 2001 animal science graduate of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, knows a thing or two about honors. She is this year's recipient of the University of Delaware's prestigious Emmalea Pusey Warner Award, presented annually to the top woman in the graduating class. She received a $1,000 U.S. Savings Bond, and her name will be engraved on plaques in the Perkins Student Center and in Alumni Hall. She also had the honor of leading the UD's alumni delegates in procession into Delaware Stadium at the start of the May 2001 commencement ceremonies.

Freeman is the second consecutive student from the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources to receive the Warner Award. Recipients must demonstrate exceptional qualities of leadership, citizenship and character exemplified by Mrs. Warner, who was instrumental in the establishment of the Women's College at UD. Faculty nominate students based on the nominee's academic excellence and active involvement in community and campus life.

"I feel blessed to have received this award, which is based on Mrs. Warner's ideals," says the unassuming Freeman. "She was a major contributor to the university and comparing my achievements with hers is inspiring."

Academic accomplishments contributed significantly to Freeman's choice as Warner Award recipient. An Ag Scholar, her grade point average is 3.42 overall and 3.77 in her major. She is a Blue Hen Ambassador, a select group of students who assist the university with recruitment. Recently, this Wilmington native named a Gates Millennium Scholar, receiving one of 1,000 scholarships provided nationwide to high-achieving minority students by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

Freeman enjoys a busy round of social activities, too. She is a member of the Color Guard, Animal Science Club and Minorities in Agriculture, Natural Resources and Related Sciences. She is also a member of Alpha Zeta, a co-ed agricultural honors fraternity; and Mortarboard, a service-oriented honor society.

In the fall, Freeman will begin graduate studies in forensic genetics and molecular biology at Michigan State University. She plans to pursue a doctorate in forensic anthropology, the forensic analysis of skeletal remains.

Farmers Union Commends Tobacco Commission's Report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) commends those who contributed to crafting the landmark recommendations of the President's Commission on Improving Economic Opportunity in Communities Dependent on Tobacco Production while Protecting Public Health.

The findings and recommendations of this diverse commission provide a basis for the pursuit of rural economic health and the health of American citizens.

"We applaud the farmers who have come together with public health advocates and economic development specialists to meet the financial needs of family farmers, the economic needs of their communities and America's evolving public health values," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU.

"This report's comprehensive findings lay the groundwork to address two of the biggest social concerns facing America: the survivability of rural communities and public health. Tobacco producers in communities that have been forced into dependency on tobacco crops know they have responsibilities to both these concerns."

The major recommendations of the commission call for:

- An increase in the federal excise tax on tobacco.
- Compensation to U.S. farmers for tobacco-growing quotas as part of a strategic plan to develop a new visionary tobacco program.
- A new economic development center to provide assistance for farmers and their communities during their economic transition from dependence on tobacco.
- Identical quality standards for imported foreign-grown tobacco as those that exist for American-grown tobacco.
- Public health initiatives including ones granting the U.S. Food and Drug Administration effective authority to regulate tobacco and the removal of addictive substances such as nicotine by cigarette makers.

"Demand for tobacco products continues to fall domestically while the tobacco companies have increased their import of foreign-grown burley tobacco by 116 percent in the past two decades," Swenson said.

"This commission report could not be more timely. It provides a win for tobacco farmers. It provides a big win the health of our nation's youth. It signals an important change in the public policy that values some of our struggling communities."

'Balancing' Incubation Needs Improves Chick Hatch

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Today's poultry industry strives to achieve maximum chick survivability and performance.

But to increase the chances of having a vibrant, healthy bird, producers should understand the "heat needs" of an embryonic egg.

That's the message that more than two dozen poultry producers and agri-industry representatives received at the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant Monday in Manheim.

Dr. Mike Hulet, Penn State poultry professor, shared some of his observations of research and work in Holland during a recent sabbatical. He placed these into a report presented at the seminar, "Incubation Challenges Using Modern, High-Performance Birds."

There were a few objectives Hulet had in mind while in Holland, a diverse and innovative ag country, he said. One was the fertilization of incoming broiler breeds. The other was determining the challenges faced by many single-stage operations and what type of egg incubation concerns they have. The focus was specifically on commercial broiler flocks.

Broiler managers increasingly put the onus of bird quality on suppliers. And managers have more centralized, computerized control of incubation and other management issues in the houses.

Hulet explained to those attending the seminar the work in transferring eggs and the methods employed. One hatchery handles 1.7 million chicks per week, an operation involving nine people. Two people work the eggs as they move to hatcheries.

Key findings along the way to improved egg "hatchability" include the ability to control temperature in brooder areas, humidity, ventilation, and egg position and turning.

Another finding: as an egg gets closer to hatching, it generates more heat. The hen has to turn the egg more frequently.

Egg handing and sanitation are also critical. So critical, in fact, that incorrect shell temperatures at certain times can affect not only hatchability but also chick quality.

The embryo temperature must be right, especially for high-yielding commercial broiler breeds. During incubation, the embryo temperature has to be right — from 99.7 degrees to 100.5 degrees Fahrenheit.

The right temperatures at the right time promote active, healthy, "lean" chicks, Hulet noted.

Too much heat can create quality problems in chicks. Chicks have been observed with exposed brains, dot on the tip of the beak, red hocks, and other problems.

Heart size can substantially increase because of improper incubation. And the ability of the bird to perform and gain can be affected by improper egg heating.

A lot of the focus of the past has been on the airflow and temperature instead of the embryonic temperature. But research has shown it is important to focus on the actual embryonic temperature, because air flow and air temperatures can be different in different areas of the hatchery.

The challenge: balance the needs of the egg embryo but maintaining external environmental conditions. That depends, of course, on the egg size and placement before hatching.

To look at shell temperature, producers can purchase an over-the-counter ear thermometer for less than $50. The human ear thermometers can be purchased at large department stores.

The optimization of temperature for the egg can optimize maturation of chicks prior to hatching. A heat production index, using carbon dioxide production, can be measured to find the right heat "balance."

The hatchery in Holland had carbon dioxide monitors installed to allow environmental controllers to increase or decrease heat and other factors when needed.

When keeping that environmental balance, 88 percent hatchability was achieved. That can be increased by a few percentage points — which can prove to be a real benefit for commercial producers.

And how to ensure this will work with U.S. producers, who use predominantly multi-stage production with modern breeders?

A big challenge: making the machinery right so uniform temperatures can be achieved for all eggs. "Or breed a chicken with (its own) thermostat," said Hulet.

Paul H. Craig
Extension Agent — Forage Crop Production

Reports from forage crop producers across the capitol region of south central Pennsylvania are that yields of first cutting of alfalfa and forage grasses were about half of historical averages this spring.

Across the region, late April and early May weather was ideal for timely harvest but production was limited. Ryelage was noticeably short and thin in many areas. Orchardgrass sods barely approached the top of the calf of your leg before reproduction was initiated.

Growers who waited for height of the orchardgrass to signal when to mow ended up with very poor quality feeds. Widespread feeding injury to alfalfa from the alfalfa weevil was reported in many areas of the state. Where control materials were not applied early, growers attempted to reduce the forage loss impact by harvesting early. Unfortunately most of these growers needed to come back and treat the stubble as regrowth was impacted.

Combined, all of these factors have left many dairy producers anticipating the need for additional forage supplies.

As the growing season progresses the role of traditional "full" season forage crops, corn silages and perennial forages is replaced by the use of "short-" season forages. These crops are used by many dairy producers to hedge against a drought and can also provide growers with crop rotation alternatives for soil fertility, soil compaction, pest control, and weed control management strategies.

These "short-" season forages can be grouped into three types of crops: summer annual grasses, small grains, and brassicas.

Summer annual grasses include forage sorghums, sudangrass, and sorghum-sudangrass hybrids. Plant in early summer for best yields. Forage sorghums can grow 8 to 13 feet tall and are primarily grown for silage. Yields have been reported to be 4 to 11 tons of dry matter per acre.

Feeding value is 80 to 90 percent less than corn silage. Sudangrass grows 4 to 7 feet tall and can yield 3 5 tons per acre of dry matter. Harvest is approximately 45 days after harvest. This summer annual grass is the best type of sorghums for hay production because its stems are smaller in diameter. Surghum-sudangrass hybrids yield less than forage sorghums and can be harvested in multiple ways.

The greatest concern when using these plant species is the potential for prussic acid poisoning.

Sorghum has the highest potential for prussic acid production and sudangrass has the lowest.

The compound is found in greatest concentration in the lowest part of the plant. The suggestion is to not harvest until plants are at least 18 to 20 inches tall. In addition, do not green chop or graze for 10 days following a killing frost. Most prussic acid is lost following the curing process for hay or silage. Nitrates from fertilizers or manure applications can occur following a rain after an extended dry period. Unlike prussic acid, nitrates will not dissipate during curing.

Delay harvest following a rain event to be safe. Grazing sorghum is not recommended for horses because it can cause a urinary tract infection.

The only small grain that could be considered "short" season forage would be oats. In recent drought years, many dairymen have sown oats into barley and wheat stubble fields or old hay fields or pastures for emergency forage production. Spring oats, just regular bin-run, feed oats, if germination-checked, can be planted as late as mid August, and produce 2 to 3 tons per acre of dry matter.

Most producers will apply summer pit manure to fields prior to planting. By staggering planting from late July through mid August harvest can be spread out. Hay making will almost surely be out of the question but silage or grazing can be used. The plants will die out over the winter.

Brassicas include turnips, kale, and rape and are considered high-yielding, high-quality, fast-growing, and primarily grazing crops. They are 85 to 95 percent digestible and can be an excellent source of protein. These crops need approximately 90 days of development before harvest.

Establishment can be "tricky" and requires good weed control and seed to soil contact.

Brassicas are a very small seed. These short season forage crops offer dairy producers a chance to "catch up" to their seasonal forage needs. As with any agronomic crop, successful production depends on fertility, weed and pest control, establishment, and management.

New Idea Introduces Rectangular Baler Line

ATLANTA, Ga. — Hay equipment is going in a new direction at New Idea these days.

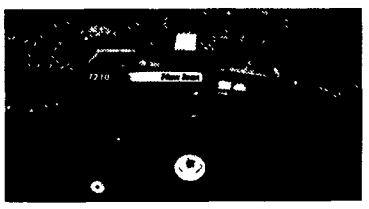
Building on the credibility of its 4600 and 4800 series round balers, New Idea recently introduced a new line of square and rectangular balers.

Featuring true centerline design, the new 7200 Series consists of five models designed to fit a wide variety of operations. Smallest in the line are the Models 7205, 7210 and 7215, which produce solid, square-shouldered, 14 x 18-inch bales. Sized for the family farm and smaller operator, the Model 7205 features a 61-inch, low-profile pickup, a 92-strokes-per-minute plunger and a four-ball twine capacity.

Moving up in capacity, the 7210 boasts a 75.9-inch pickup, 11L x 14 flotation tires and a 100-spm plunger. Like the 7205, it can also be equipped with a hydraulic-driven bale thrower, a hydraulic pickup lift and hydraulic density control as options.

The highest level of performance, however, is inherent in the Model 7215, which comes with a 100-spm plunger that rides on eight sealed ball bearing rollers and a 75.9-inch low-profile pickup that sweeps the windrows with 112 tines on four tine bars.

"For bigger bales and even more capacity, New Idea has also introduced the Model 7220," said Tony Solon, general marketing manager for New Idea products. "Its performance features start with a 16 x 18-inch bale chamber that is fed by a 77.5-inch, four-bar pickup. Other extras include standard-equipment hydraulic density control; a three-joint, equal-angle driveline, and 31 x 13.5-15 tires."



The New Idea 7210 is one of five new rectangular balers from New Idea featuring true centerline design with the crop moving in a straight line from the pickup throat to the bale chute to minimize leaf loss and crop damage.

All four models also feature a torque limiting, overrunning clutch; chain drives throughout the machine; adjustable pickup flotation; dual-gauge wheels; and centering augers that gently gather the crop from the outer ends of the pickup. The best feature, though, is the centerline design that positions the baler right behind the tractor.

"Since the crop moves in a straight line from the pickup throat to the bale chute, it never has to change directions, which means there's less chance for leaf loss and crop damage," Solon said. "The use of a pre-packer chamber behind the pickup also contributes to more uniform bale density and consistent flake size."

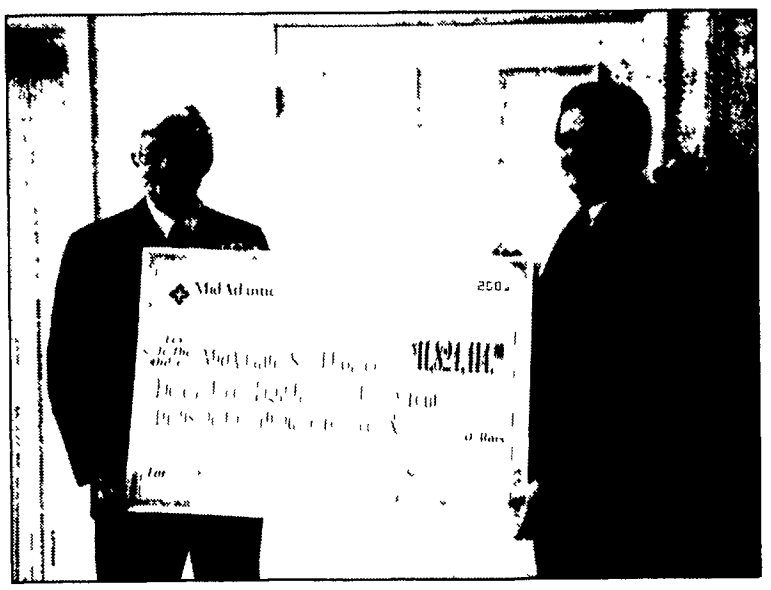
MidAtlantic Farm Credit Returns More Than $11 Million To Stockholders

WESTMINSTER, Md. — MidAtlantic Farm Credit stockholders recently received patronage refund checks for 2000 according to Robert Frazee, president of MidAtlantic Farm Credit. The patronage refund for borrowers of the farmer-owned cooperative totaled more than $11 million. Borrowers received, on average, a rebate of 25 percent of the interest paid on their loans in 2000.

"MidAtlantic Farm Credit had another successful year in 2000, and we are pleased to be able to share our success with our borrowers," said Walt Hopkins, chairman of the MidAtlantic board of directors and a dairy farmer from Lewes, Del.

"When we distribute our profits to our borrowers, it reduces their effective cost of borrowing," Frazee states. "This is just one more example of the distinct financial benefits in doing business on a cooperative basis."

MidAtlantic makes long-term farm and country home loans, provides loans for equipment, machinery, and buildings as well as short-term operating loans. Other financial services available through MidAtlantic Farm Credit are crop insurance, appraisal services, and leasing programs.



MidAtlantic's Board Chairman Walter Hopkins of Lewes, Del., left, and President/CEO Robert Frazee display a check that represents the amount of patronage returned to the farmer-owned cooperative's members in 2001.

At December 31, 2000, MidAtlantic had approximately $1 billion of loans outstanding to over 9,000 members. MidAtlantic Farm Credit is the largest agricultural lender on the east coast and serves its customers through 18 branch offices located throughout the eastern shore of Maryland and Virginia, Delaware, eastern Pennsylvania, and mid-Maryland.

Land Pride 35 Series 3-Section Rotary Cutter

SALINA, Kan. — The all new 35 Series 3-Section Rotary Cutter, RCR3515, from Land Pride is perfect for wide open grass maintenance. Available in 540 or 1000 RPM, this cutter features a 15,000 fpm blade tip speed ensuring a clean cut in material up to 1-½-inch diameter. The round back design allows for more efficient handling and dispersing of material.

Standard stump jumpers and heavy-duty blades keep you up and running in uneven terrain. The three sections are hinged to let you shape the cutter to the job making this cutter ideal for rough ground where hillsides, ditches and hollows can cause uneven cutting.

Land Pride's new 15'-foot cutter offers a one-inch hinge rod, heavy-duty axles and two-inch gearbox output shaft. With 10 gauge deck material, ¼-inch sidewall thickness and replaceable wheel spindles, this cutter has features normally found on heavier cutters. This unit incorporates a low tongue weight for smaller HP tractors and also offers a longer tongue allowing for a tighter turning radius.

Land Pride also offers the 3-Section 15-foot rotary cutter in a RC50 Series heavy-duty model with a three-inch diameter cutting capacity and a RC60 Series extra-heavy-duty model to tackle material up to four-inch diameter.

Yetter Company Offers Full Line Of Markers For Strip Tilling

MACOMB, Ill. — Yetter Manufacturing Company has introduced new marker mounting brackets for mounting markers on a variety of strip-till and fertilizer applicators. These new brackets add yet another offering to the extensive Yetter strip-till product line.

Dependable markers are critical in strip-till applications. A clear mark helps to avoid costly skips and overlaps plus reduces the chance of running off the strips at planting time.

Yetter markers maximize down pressure by mounting low on the implement. This means a more distinguishable mark in tough conditions. It also reduces the chance of the marker getting caught on fence posts, trees or power lines. Adding Yetter markers extends the life of existing equipment helping to provide a quicker return on investment.

Yetter markers are built tough to provide long lasting reliability in heavy residue conditions. Marker arms are constructed with reinforced tubular steel for added strength and durability. The marker base offers protection to the hydraulic system while providing easy access for maintenance.

Yetter markers are available 15-foot — 41-foot to fit most brands of planters, drills and toolbars. With the wide variety of disc blades available and the assortment of mounting brackets, there is a Yetter marker that will fit any farming operation.

EPA Approves Ecolab FMD Disinfectant

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The EPA has granted approval of a product from Ecolab Inc., that will help all livestock producers and owners in the United States protect their livestock against potential infection by Foot and Mouth disease. The recent outbreak of the disease has severely damaged the agricultural industry of several European and South American countries. Attempts are being made to limit its spread throughout other parts of the world.

The product, Oxy-Sept®333 (EPA Reg. No. 1677-129), is an antimicrobial disinfectant used in housing facilities and other sources of cross contamination. Formulated for rapid soil penetration and disinfecting properties, its effectiveness is based on a stabilized peroxyacetic acid formulation.

"As a technology, peroxyacetic acid has been known for its effective disinfecting and sanitizing applications for some time. Ecolab expanded the applications of this material into several areas in the food safety arena," says Chris Sigurdson, agri senior marketing manager, Ecolab. "It is already used in processing plants to protect vegetables, dairy products, red meat, and beverages. This new approval takes our program to the next level by offering a new biosecurity solution for food animal producers."

Oxy-Sept 333 is an effective disinfectant against bacteria and viruses. It controls a wide range of pathogens, including: Salmonella chloraesius and enteriditis, Staphylococcus aureus, Enterobacter, Pseudomonas aeruginosa, Listeria monocytogenes, E. coli, as well as viruses such as several types of Influenza A (H10N7), Newcastle Disease virus, Infectious bovine rhinotracheitis (IBR), and now Foot and Mouth disease (Aphthovirus).

"In the past, food animal producers and livestock owners have concentrated their disease-prevention efforts around animal vaccination and treatment, which are of course crucial elements of disease control. But without a solid environmental sanitation program in place, we're potentially leaving too many open doors for disease transmission," Sigurdson added.

Measure Ensures Access To Funds

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A measure that would ensure that farmers continue to have access to state funds for subsidized crop insurance has been approved by the state Senate, according to Sen. Noah Wenger (R-36).

Wenger, who sponsored Senate Bill 793, said the legislation would amend the 1999 Drought, Orchard, and Nursery Indemnity and Flood Relief Act, which provided $60 million for emergency drought relief and $5.6 million in crop insurance assistance to Pennsylvania farmers.

Of that money, a total of approximately $3.5 million remains unspent. Wenger said the funds will be placed in the state's General Fund on June 30 unless the Legislature extends the program.

"We need to make sure this money remains available to farmers as we try to encourage more farm families to invest in crop insurance," the senator said.

Senate Bill 793 would allow all remaining crop insurance funds to remain in the program for use until the money is exhausted. The bill will also transfer unallocated drought relief funds to the crop insurance program.

In addition, the measure will extend the "sunset date" for the state's orchard and nursery indemnity program to June 30, 2002. Wenger explained that the program was designed to help farmers hurt by the recent outbreak of plum pox. Initially supported by $2 million in state funds, a remaining $500,000 is also set to lapse into the General Fund on June 30.

"It is important that the remaining money continue to be at the Agriculture Department's disposal so that they can quickly address any outbreaks in the future," Wenger said.

FSA Provides USDA Farm Storage Loans

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — County Executive Director Hollis D. Baker recently reminded Chester-Delaware County farmers of Farm Storage Facility Loans available through the Farm Service Agency (FSA).

"At a time when commercial storage facilities are at maximum capacity and charging premium rates nationwide, on-farm storage provides producers with an attractive alternative," said Ms. Baker.

The Farm Service Agency is offering seven-year, low-cost loans to grain producers desiring to build new or upgrade existing storage facilities and related essential, permanently affixed drying or handling equipment. Eligible loan opportunities include, but are not limited to:

- New conventional-type cribs or bins, oxygen-limiting and other upright silo-type structures, and flat-type structures designed for whole grain storage.
- Perforated floors, safety equipment, quality improvement equipment, electrical equipment and concrete components considered essential for a fully functional storage facility.
- Remodeling existing storage facilities.

According to Ms. Baker, marketing flexibility is the primary benefit gained from on-farm storage facilities. "Privately owned facilities give producers control over where and when they sell their crops, increasing their opportunity to get the best price for their crop," said Ms. Baker.

Farm Storage Facility Loans must be approved prior to site preparation, equipment purchase or construction, and must be secured by a promissory note and security agreement. Special real estate provisions apply for loans exceeding $50,000 or when the aggregate outstanding loan balance exceeds $50,000.

The maximum loan amount will be 85 percent of the net cost of the applicant's needed storage or handling equipment, not to exceed $100,000 per borrower. A minimum downpayment to the supplier or contractor is required to bridge the gap between the net cost of the storage facility and the loan amount.

Fixed interest rates on Farm Storage Loans are equivalent to the rate of interest charged on U.S. Treasury Securities of comparable maturity on the date the loan is approved. As of May 2001, the annual interest rate is five percent.

"Although we are in the early stages of 2001 crops, advance planning for storage will mean one less decision that needs to be made at harvest, allowing time to develop marketing strategies to maximize potential income," said Ms. Baker.

For detailed applicant and facility eligibility criteria regarding Farm Storage Facility Loans, and to schedule an appointment to file an application, contact the Chester-Delaware County office at (610) 696-8750, Ext. 2, or visit FSA on the World Wide Web at http://www.fsa.udsa.gov.

New Environmental Regulations Threaten Farmer Cooperative Refiners

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Burdensome new environmental regulations, combined with a lack of access to capital, threaten farmer-owned cooperative refiners, which play a vital role in meeting the fuel needs of farms and rural America.

"Though less than two percent of the refining industry, farmer cooperatives supply about 40 percent of all on-farm fuel needs in the United States," David Graves, president and CEO of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC), recently told the House Committee on Agriculture's Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit, Rural Development and Research. These farmer-owned businesses also supply much of the highway diesel and home heating oil used in rural America, being the sole supplier in many areas.

The farm supply cooperatives serve as an important component of the U.S. energy infrastructure. Unique in the refining industry, these businesses are owned by their farmer-customers, resulting in sensitivity to the special energy needs of rural America.

Now, however, new environmental regulations from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) threaten the continued economic viability of the cooperative petroleum refining system. These cooperatives, unlike other private companies, do not have equal access to capital markets; for instance, they can not generally issue stock to raise the money necessary to implement the new regulations. "The combined capital costs for cooperative refiners to meet sulfur requirements for gasoline and diesel fuel over a compressed time period total an estimated $400 million-500 million, far exceeding the current book value of these farmer-owned assets," says Graves.

The added costs of these regulations offer no return on investment, and divert funds from profit making enterprises. This adversely effects the farmer-owners, who suffer through reduced patronage earnings and erosion of their equity investment.

To address the problem, NCFC proposes a modernization of the B&I loan program. This would allow cooperative refiners to meet their regulatory burdens, while at the same time giving all farmer cooperatives better access to the capital necessary to pursue new market opportunities and help their farmer-owners generate more income. NCFC also believes that Congress and the administration should explore other ways of helping farmers join together to improve their economic well-being.

While the USDA's Business and Industry (B&I) loan program does offer financial assistance to rural businesses, loans are capped at $25 million. "Unfortunately, the identified regulatory compliance capital requirements alone faced by farmer-cooperative refiners overwhelm the current design capacity of the B&I loan program," Graves said.

NCGA Gets Good Reviews On Farm Bill Proposal

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The early reviews are in, and the consensus of policymakers in Washington is that the National Corn Growers Association's (NCGA) innovative counter-cyclical income support proposal deserves serious consideration.

Since NCGA unveiled its farm bill proposal in testimony before the House Agriculture Committee on April 25, reaction from federal agencies, Capitol Hill offices and other commodity groups has been encouraging.

In the last month, NCGA has been busy briefing administration officials, congressional leaders and other farm groups on the merits of our proposal. The timeframe for incorporating the counter-cyclical income support proposal into a new farm bill is limited. In all likelihood, a farm bill will be reported out of the House Agriculture Committee by the end of July.

The accelerated schedule the House will follow in crafting a farm bill provides precious little time for NCGA, its state associations, checkoff boards and other advocates to influence their work. The Senate Ag Committee is expected to announce its hearing schedule soon.

Brent Porteus, chairman of the NCGA Public Policy Action Team and a Coshocton, Ohio, farmer said: "Our biggest challenge now is to get people to look at our proposal and evaluate it on its merits. It's really important to understand that our counter-cyclical proposal incorporates-and does not replace-what worked well in the '96 Farm Bill. But it also represents an evolution in policy in that it capitalizes on the previous bill's strengths in a manner that is WTO friendly. The beauty of our counter-cyclical proposal is that it moves us down the road in terms of creating a good market-driven policy that avoids the pitfalls of previous policies that were market-distorting."

Sanitarians Present Award

RESTON, Va. - What do countless years of dedication to the dairy industry get these days?

For Jerry Ensor of Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers, the answer is simple. Ensor recently received the "Sanitarians Award" presented by the Pennsylvania Association of Food and Environmental Sanitarians (PAMFES).

The award was presented during the PAMFES Annual Conference, May 15-16 at Penn State University. The honor was bestowed on Ensor for his commitment to the industry and the dairy farmers he serves in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The plaque presented to Ensor reads, "For the unfaltering discharge and wise administration of duties, recognition of responsibility, zealous interest, and tireless devotion in the field of dairy sanitation, and exemplary conduct as a sanitarian."

Now that may sound pretty impressive, and a bit of a mouthful, but Ensor said, "It was a great feeling and I was really surprised. I've had a rewarding career and it has been a pleasure working with dairy farmers."

"The PAMFES Awards and Resolutions Committee selects a field representative with years of experience that are successful at what they do," said Eugene Frey, PAMFES secretary. The committee reviews a person's love and service for the industry, and how they help farmers become successful. "We select a person that does a good job and has a good rapport with the farmers they work with," Frey said.

Ensor's background and successful career reflect his extensive knowledge and experience in the dairy industry. He has served as a field representative with Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers for 17 years, and previously for Maryland Cooperative and Dairymen, Inc. Ensor began his career calibrating farm tanks and as a lab technician for Maryland Cooperative.

"During the past 35 years, I have worked in nine counties in Pennsylvania and five counties in Maryland," Ensor said. "I've driven many, many miles, sometimes 60,000 a year."

Ensor resides in Westminster, Md., and his field territory includes York and Adams counties in Pennsylvania and Frederick, Carroll, and Baltimore counties in Maryland. He was raised on a dairy farm in Forest Hill, Md., and was a member of the winning Maryland 4-H Dairy Judging team that competed in Iowa and Bristol, England. He and his wife Ruth have four children and seven grandchildren.

Dairy Expert Dr. Hutjens Speaks At Producer Meeting

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Renaissance Nutrition, Inc., along with Biotal and Mycogen, featured two outstanding speakers at a recent dairy producer's meeting.

Speakers included well-known Dr. Mike Hutjens from the University of Illinois, and a regularly featured author in such publications as Hoard's Dairyman and Dairy Today, and Richard Bennek, a specialist in agronomy and dairy science from Mycogen Seeds. The dinner event was held on Tuesday, May 22, and attended by a large number of producers from south-central Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Topics presented included: 11 Management Factors That Can Make You $33,000; More Income With An 80 Cow Herd; Forage Quality And Fermentation Profiling; and Importance Of Selecting Hybrids For Silage.

Producers, along with other guests, were invited to participate in the discussion, as well as to ask questions pertinent to the topics presented. Prior to this dinner event, Dr. Hutjens spent the day touring area farms and providing insight into a variety of management and nutritional concerns. Accompanying Hutjens was Biotal's John Zmich and Renaissance Nutrition Consultant David Kehr.

House Approves Miller's Agriculture By-Product Technology Bill

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Continuing its commitment to support 21st century agriculture in the commonwealth, the House approved legislation introduced by Rep. Sheila Miller (R-129) to encourage the use and development of improved methods of managing manure and other agricultural by-products.

"This is great news for the agriculture industry and for our environment," Miller said. "We must continue to improve our farming practices if we are to remain competitive and maintain agriculture as the number one industry in Pennsylvania.

"Protecting the environment is also important because farmers rely so heavily on the quality of our land and water resources," she said.

The bill, first introduced in 1999, requires the Department of Agriculture to evaluate new by-product management practices and promote the education and use of those practices through loan and grant programs.

"Better by-product management results in the production of energy, pathogen-free fertilizers, animal feed supplements and clean water," Miller said. "It also helps increase revenues for agricultural producers."

House Bill 674 also creates the Agriculture By-Product Technology Board, which will work with the Department of Agriculture to research and evaluate new technologies. It will be responsible for assessing regional manure and by-product reduction needs and for encouraging cooperation among the agricultural community, industry and local government regarding the use and development of the new technologies.

Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.

Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader. With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck. Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage It is especially helpful in larger silos.

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit. All parts of the BlueMax® subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy. For strength, there are reinforcements all around Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier

Waterbeds for Cows

ALANTA® A member of the LimPoly group of companies Patent Pending

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

Here's What Some of Your Neighbors Say About Alanta Waterbeds:

David Bittler, Fleetwood, PA
"We are very pleased with the decision to go with the waterbeds. First calf heifers have adapted exceptionally well and are often lying down within two hours of being put in the stall."

Ichtus Farm, Lititz, PA
"I'm pleased with how the waterbeds retain their comfort over time."

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Consider a Mueller precooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

BEEF TIPS

How to add Simmental genetics to your herd (Part 1)

1. Use a purebred Simmental bull that will work with your cows. How can you buy a Simmental bull and be sure?

Buy from a reputable, knowledgeable Simmental breeder. Discuss with the breeder the traits of his bull and its pedigree. Remember: not all bulls are bred to work with all cows.

2. For a list of all breeders in your state, call the numbers listed below for a FREE catalogue. Also ask to be put on the mailing list for all area sales. A FREE catalogue will be sent to you three weeks before the sale.
